SHERMAN GETS CLOCK

The old grandfather clock, originally owned by Kate O. Wolf and which has been under the custody of the sheriff since a fight for its possession started in the local court nearly two years ago, now becomes the property of George W. Sherman, of Westminster, formerly of New Oxford. This change of ownership comes as the result of a decision handed down by the Superior Court of Pennsylvania while sitting in Pittsburgh Tuesday reversing the decision of the Adams county court. The decision, further directs that judgement be entered here in favor of the plaintiff, Mr. Sherman, carrying with it the costs of the case. Under an agreement of record the clock will be delivered to Mr. Sherman. Incidentally the decision of the Superior Court in this case known as George W. Sherman versus C. A. Stoner marks the first time that Judge Donald P. McPherson has been reversed since he became president judge of the Adams-Fulton judicial district six years ago. Costs in the case amounted to $400 while the clock itself is worth only about $200.

C. A. Stoner, who bought the clock at public sale, endeavored to hold his possession. Sherman represented that the clock had been given to him by Kate Wolf before she was taken to Harrisburg.

SHOOTS AND HANGS SELF

To make doubly sure of taking his own life, Earl Munshour, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Munshour, of Freedom township, shot himself in the heart with a shot gun and hanged himself an instant later Tuesday afternoon in the loft of the barn, on the farm of his father. Dr. Crist, Adams county coroner, decided no inquest was necessary. Members of the family are unable to give any cause for the act. He left no note and did not intimate he contemplated the act. The body was discovered by the boy's mother while searching for him. Terrified she ran screaming to Road-haupt's mill for assistance. The boy, no doubt, in a fit of melancholia, took the gun and after carefully preparing the rope fired the shot which was sufficient to kill him. While there is only scanty evidence, there are indications that the youth took poison before shooting himself. Young Munshour was apparently in good health, altho unusually quiet, when he ate dinner with the family. Besides his parents he is survived by a sister, 2 step-brothers, and a step-sister.

GIANT BLAST TEARS

OUT WALL OF ROCK

The Bethlehem Mines Corporation set off a blast of 30 holes which threw out from 50,000 to 75,000 tons of stone at their quarries, near Bittingers, on Thursday afternoon. Three hundred and fifty cases of 50 pounds each of 40 per cent dynamite, the product of the "Trojan" Powder Company, was used. A representative of that company did the wiring and set off the blast. The holes were about 6 inches in diameter and 60 feet deep, the drilling of which required many weeks' work.

There were many people on hand to witness the culmination of the work and see the effect wrought by the giant explosion. It ticked as if some superhuman had made a great effort and pushed out the solid breast of rock, 10 feet thick, 40 feet high, and 200 feet long, which toppled over with a mighty crash and was followed by a cloud of smoke and dust which slowly floated away.

It is estimated by Foreman Earl Bechtel that the loosened stone will keep the force of men busy for the next five weeks, working ten hours a day. Some of the chunks thrown out are so large they will require blasting to remove. The lime stone is raised up an incline to a big crusher, shaped like an old-fashioned coffee mill, on a large scale, where it is broken to a certain grade and then loaded on cars for shipment to the Bethlehem Steel Company's furnaces at Steelton or Sparrows Point. Here it is used as a flux in the process of manufacturing Bessemer steel.

Charles Weinberg, and Gus Makaris, Hanover, took movie pictures of the blast, which will be added to films already taken of scenes at the quarry while the workmen were drilling the holes and loading them.

GRIEVED TO DEATH

Grief over the death of her son in France shortened the life of Mrs. John H. Miller who succumbed after a long illness at her home in Bonneauville Thursday evening at 6:30 o'clock. While serving with the American Expeditionary Forces, France, Guy Miller, a member of the 316th Infantry, died. Since receiving the news of her son's death, Mrs. Miller was in ill health until she too passed away. Cancer of the liver was given as the cause of death. Mrs. Miller, who was 66 years and 9 months old, spent her life in the Bonneauville section of the county. She moved into the village seven years ago. She was a member of the Rosary society. Her husband; two daughters, Mrs. Augustus Hawn, near Bonneauville; Mrs. George Gebhart, Bonneauville; a brother, Lewis Miller, Irish-town; and a sister, Mrs. John Feiser, Philadelphia, survive her. Funeral services were held Monday morning in St. Joseph's Catholic church, Bonneauville by Rev. Fr. J. M. Nidhols. Interment was made in St. Joseph's cemetery.

VERY MUCH ALIVE

W. A. Feiser, Hanover, formerly of town, is very much alive, altho a York newspaper Friday morning carried the startling headlines, "W. A. Feiser Dead—Former Hanover Resident Dies in the State Hospital at Harrisburg—Worked for W. M. RR." The mistake was evidently made by the head-writer who, taking a Hanover item which told of the death of a former resident and which said that the undertaker had gone to Harrisburg to bring back the body, neglected to read further than the first line of copy—unped to the conclusion that Mr. Feiser himself had died. So if you see "Bill" don't think you are seeing a ghost. The opportunity is not given to many persons to read of their own "death."

BREAD PRICES DROP

Altho the price of wheat has been down for some time and the price of flour has dropped accordingly, it was not until Friday that this drop was reflected at all in the price of bread here and then not to any extent. One firm, the Hanover Steam Bakery, announced to its patrons Friday morning that one cent would be cut from the price of its loaves of bread but the price of the small loaf, 9 cents, will remain the same. G. F. Eckker, of the McSherrystown bakery, cut the price of his bread Saturday. The large loaves which sold at 13 cents were cut to 12 cents and the 9-cent loaves now sell at 8 cents.

The Hershey Baking Company, of Hanover, cut the price of its bread Saturday morning. The large loaves which sold at 13 cents now sell at 12 cents and the small loaves which sold for 9 cents were cut to 8 cents.

NEW CAFE DICKS

ON THE CONEWAGO

Howard Dicks, who has done so much to make the resort at that place the most famous camping ground in this section of the state. Mr. Myers has had considerable experience in the restaurant business, and with the great increase in the number of campers coming to Dicks every year, he sees the need of a up-to-date cafe at that place. Lunches, ice cream, soft drinks and various delicacies will be handled. An orchestra will furnish music for dancing on Saturday nights and on holidays, while a Victrola will be installed for the use of weekday dancers. No Sunday dancing will be permitted. WOMEN WHO CANNOT WORK

Read Mrs. Corley's Letter and Benefit by Her Experience

Edmund, S. C.—"I was run down with nervousness and female trouble and suffered every month. I was not able to do any work and tried a lot of medicine, but got no relief. I saw your medicine advertised in a little book that was thrown in my door, and I had not taken two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before I could see it was helping me. I am keeping house now and am able to do all of my work. I cannot say enough for your medicine. It has done more for me than any doctor. I have not paper enough to tell you how much it has done for me and for my friends. You may print this letter if you wish."—ELIZABETH C. CORLEY, care of A. P. Corley, Edmund, S. C.

Ability to stand the strain of work is the privilege of the strong and healthy, but how our hearts ache for the weak and sickly women struggling with their daily rounds of household duties, with backaches, headaches, nervousness and almost every movement brings a new pain. Why will not the mass of letters from women all over this country, which we have been publishing, convince such women that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help them just as surely as it did Mrs. Corley?

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is a Brisk Purgative With Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the now, nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One Calotab on the tongue at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Druggists sell Calotabs only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Your money will be cheerfully refunded if you do not find them delightful.—(Adv.)

KEEP SILVER IN BEST CONDITION

If Cleaned Regularly Little Time or Effort to Keep It Bright and Lustrous.

SULPHIDE CAUSES TARNISH

Glittering Surface May Be Obtained by Use of Friction Cleaners, by Electrolysis or by Boiling in Strong Solution.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"All the table service was of silver and gold." Winifred was reading aloud from the society columns an account of a dinner, and as she read the last item her voice was full of awe. "Think of it, Nan; plates and everything, solid silver."

"I am thinking of it," said Nan, the practical one; "and I'm thinking also that I'm glad I haven't on my hands the cleaning of all these solid silver plates and everything." The flat silver that was given Jack and me when we were married is more than a plenty for me when cleaning day comes around. I like housework, but I do detest cleaning silver."

Many women feel as Nan did; but if silver is cleaned regularly, little time or effort is required to keep it bright and lustrous. The office of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture gives the following directions on the care of silver:

Causes of Tarnish.

The tarnish on silver is silver sulphide, and is due to the sulphur compounds in the air where coal and gas are burned, and also in many foods, in wool, in rubber, and in some bleached and dyed materials.

This is the reason silversmiths rarely, if ever, use white cotton flannel for their cases of silver. Dryness prevents tarnish somewhat; so camphor, which absorbs moisture, is sometimes put into the silver drawer. Silver may be cleaned by the use of certain powders, pastes, and cloths, which clean by friction, by boiling it in a strong alkaline solution, or by a process known as electrolysis.

The materials which clean by friction are whiting, jeweler's rouge, and commercial pastes or powders. The noncommercial powders are mixed to a paste with water, ammonia, or alcohol, rubbed on the silver, allowed to dry, and then polished off with a soft cloth, chamol, or a brush. The result is bright, lustrous silver. Prepared cloths, sold under various trade names, also clean by friction. They are usually cotton flannel treated with a cleaning mixture, and are convenient but sometimes relatively expensive.

The alkaline solution for cleaning silver is made by dissolving four teaspoons borax, three teaspoons washing soda, or two teaspoons lye (caustic soda) in one quart water. The silver is placed in an old kettle or pan, covered with this solution, boiled for 10 minutes, and cooled in the water.

The Electrolytic Method.

One method of removing the tarnish from silver by electrolysis is the following:

Fill an enameled or agateware kettle partly full of water in which has been dissolved one teaspoon of either washing soda or baking soda and one teaspoon salt to each quart of water. Heat this solution to the boiling point, put in strips of aluminum or bright zinc, add the tarnished silver, and boil it. The silver must be covered completely by the water, and each piece must be in contact with the aluminum or the zinc, either directly or through other silver. When the tarnish has disappeared the silver should be removed from the kettle, washed, and dried with a clean, soft cloth. An aluminum kettle may be used, but it soon corrodes and must be cleaned, as only a clean, bright kettle serves the purpose. The zinc also grows dull and then is less active. It may be cleaned, however, in water containing a little hydrochloric (muriatic) acid, which is very poisonous and must be handled with extreme care.

Silver cleaned either in an alkaline solution or by electrolysis lacks luster, which cleaning by friction gives. It may be made bright, however, by a little rubbing with a soft cloth or chamol.

INCLUDE VEGETABLES IN THE WINTER DIET

Necessary During Cold Weather as Well as Summer.

Tired-Out Feeling Which Many People Have at End of Winter Comes From Lack of Supply of Garden Truck and Fruits.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Vegetables should be freely included in the winter diet as well as in the summer one. Doctors say that that tired-out feeling which many people have at the end of winter—"spring fever"—often comes from a lack of fruits and vegetables in the winter diet. Plenty of vegetables keep the children well and make their meals more appetizing. Vegetables mashed and put through a sieve are more easily digested by little children.

Salts of many kinds are needed by the body, or it will not work smoothly. Vegetables and fruit are rich in them and if you eat a variety you are sure to get all the kinds of salt you need.

When the water in which vegetables are cooked is thrown away, valuable salts are often wasted. Sometimes the flavor is not desirable, but if it is good save this water for soup or gravy. An even better process is to cook the vegetables in as little water as possible so there is none left to drain off, or bake or steam it. Canned and dried vegetables often need only skillful seasoning to make them taste as good as the fresh variety.

Canned corn is very good when turned into a baking dish with the addition of milk and seasoning added, heated through in the oven, and allowed to brown on top. Outside stalks of celery, a green pepper, or both, chopped and added before baking, will vary the flavor of the dish.

Spinach Loaf.

A small can of spinach, chard, or beet tops, combined with rice or bread crumbs, will serve seven or eight people if it is made into a loaf. Asparagus or string beans are also good served in this way:

- 2 cupsful cooked lima beans.
- 1 can chopped spinach.
- 4 cupsful boiled rice.
- 2 cupsful white sauce.
- 1 red pepper.

Make a thick white sauce of two cupsful of milk, four tablespoonsful of flour, four tablespoonsful of butter, and one teaspoonful of salt. Melt salt and mix with flour, add to milk and stir over the fire until it thickens. Mix with the rice, chopped spinach and pepper. Form into a loaf and bake 20 or 30 minutes.

Investigations with dried vegetables, which have been conducted in the experimental kitchen of the United States Department of Agriculture, show that provided the dried vegetables are of good quality they are quite as satisfactory when they are cooked without previous soaking, as when soaked, and oftentimes better.

MAKE SAVORY FRUIT PASTES

Combination of Different Kinds of Fruits Is Excellent—Canned Goods Can Be Used.

Fruit pastes are made from the edible portion of fruit which after cooking has been passed through a sieve and cooked again until the excess water is driven off. Only a small amount of sugar is required. A combination of different kinds of fruit pulp makes a delightfully flavored paste, but peaches alone make a delicious one. Canned fruit can also be used to make paste. When the pulp is boiled down until very thick, pour it in ½-inch layers on marble or glass slabs or on a platter. Place where there is a strong circulation of air and allow the paste to dry for two or three days. When it is sufficiently dry, cut it into 1-inch squares. Roll in granulated sugar and place again in a draft. Paste may be packed in tin boxes, glass jars, or paraffin-coated containers.

PASTRY SHELLS

Bake pastry in or on the outside of muffin pans and fill these shells with jam, preserves, or well-sweetened stewed fruit. With or without the addition of whipped cream these form a delicious dessert.

These shells may be filled with creamed chicken, creamed peas, or other creamed vegetables, adding an attractive dish for another meal.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Mildewed leather may be cleaned with vaseline.

Long handles on brooms, brushes and dustpans save the back.

Dinner plates should always be sent to the table warm enough not to cool the food served on them.

To remove grease spots from silk, take a lump of magnesia, rub it wet on spot, let dry, then brush the powder off.

Keep empty spools and slip them over the nails in the hookless closet. They are a great protection to the clothes.

RUSTIC BIRD HOUSES.

The bird cabin in Fig. 1 has a box foundation. The box will make a strong structure and water-tight walls, whereas a great deal of chinking and rechinking of the spaces between the logs would be necessary if the box were not used.

A starch box may be used for the cabin's base. Cut the gable ends to fit upon the box ends, and the two sides of the roof to fit the gable ends, and fasten all together. If the cabin is intended for wrens, cut a seven-eighths-inch doorway; if for bluebirds, cut a one and one-half-inch doorway.

Gather slender, straight sticks for logs. Cut these into side and end logs of the right length, so when laid up against the box walls their ends will

A HOME-MADE INDOOR TENNIS OUTFIT.

After the supper dishes have been cleared away, what better fun than a game of tennis upon the dining-table.

Probably the only thing that you will have to buy is a pair of 4 or 5-inch iron clamps such as are used for curtain-stretcher ends (Fig. 3).

The clamps support the ends of the tennis-net (Figs. 1 and 4), for which purpose you can find nothing better.

For the net get a piece of muslin 7 inches wide by a few inches shorter than the table is wide, or, if you want a transparent net, take a piece of curtain net or mosquito-netting. Turn over ½ inch of both top and bottom edges, and sew, to give them body. Figure 4 shows how the net is supported. Slip the clamps over the table edges, after lapping pieces of cloth over the surface as shown in Fig. 4 to prevent the iron from scratching the finish. Place the clamps directly opposite one another, and turn the lar and project about an inch. Fig. 3 shows how to notch the sides of each log at the points of crossing, so the ends will interlock. At the doorway fill in a thin piece of wood bent to extend around the opening for jambs to butt the short logs against, and tack through this frame into the short-log ends.

Cover the roof with pieces of bark and fasten a branch along the peak for a ridgepole. The bird cabin should have a rustic post support, as is suggested in Fig. 1.

A log about two feet in length is required for the house in Fig. 4. A cavity must be hollowed out in this of the form of a woodpecker's hole. Figs. 5 and 6 show how to do this by sawing the log in half lengthwise, then gouging one-half of the hole out of each half. After cutting the hole and the entrance opening, nail the halves together, saw off the top on a slant and nail a short board to it for a roof. This house may be strapped to a tree trunk.

The rustic ark in Fig. 7 is built upon a foundation made as shown in Fig. 8. Round the tops of the uprights and fasten these pieces to the base-board an inch from the ends. The roof is made of bark. If possible, strip this from a log in one piece. If you cannot do this, roof over the framework with thin wood from berry boxes, then fasten pieces of bark upon it. The ends and the bottom should also be covered with bark. Bore the entrance hole through one end. Screw a pair of screweyes into the uprights to fasten wire hangers to.

The bird temple in Fig. 9 has a baseboard and a roofboard each about eight inches square (Fig. 10). Connect these with four corner posts set into holes bored in both pieces. Set the base holes an inch in from the corners and the roof holes two inches in from the corners. With the posts driven into their holes, cut short pieces of branches, notch their ends and pile them up log-cabin fashion to inclose the walls. You will notice that the logs of each tier are shorter than those of the tier beneath.

Thumbscrews up, as shown. Then prepare a pair of stick posts 6 inches long (A, Fig. 3), screw a pair of small screweyes into each, one near each end, and with cord bind the posts to the clamp as shown in Fig. 4. Sew short pieces of cord to the ends of the net, and tie these to the screweyes in post A.

To make a long enough court, it is best to extend the dining-table, and put in several extra table leaves. If it is a circular table, this will give you a court of about the proportions shown in Figs. 1 and 2. Use cloth tape or cotton-twine for marking off the inner left and right-hand courts. Twelve inches or so each side of the net, pass a piece of tape or twine entirely around the table, as shown at B (Fig. 5), then connect these pieces at their centers with piece C. If the joints between the table boards come as they do in Fig. 5, you can pass the ends of strip C through the joints, pull them tight, and tie underneath the table. Strips B and C will make the four courts marked L (left) and R (right) in Fig. 2.

Tennis rackets can be made in several ways. Figure 6 shows about the simplest possible scheme, a square board centered on and nailed to a stick handle. The racket in Fig. 7 is made of a hard-pail cover and a stick.

The rules for table tennis are almost identical with those for outdoor tennis. If you are not acquainted with these, it will be easy to find a tennis enthusiast who will coach you. The player who serves first must serve the ball into her opponent's right court (R, Fig. 2), first, then into the left court (L), and when it becomes the opponent's serve, she must serve into her opponent's right court, then into her left. The ball must be considered in play as long as it can be kept bouncing upon the table, except when it bounces twice before being returned.

Fuel From Wheat Straw.

A ton of sun-dried wheat straw has been found from the Canadian experiments to have a fuel value about equal to that of 32 gallons of gasoline. It yields about 10,000 cubic feet of purified gas, 600 to 650 pounds of carbon residue, and about 10 gallons of tarry liquid. The gas, which has a caloric value of about 400 British thermal units per cubic foot, burns with a blue flame, and has a slight odor. Its combustible constituents are carbon monoxide, methane and hydrogen. The carbon residue is capable of being reduced to a very fine powder.

RESULTS REMARKABLE SAYS NEW YORK MAN

Prominent Rochester Citizen Tried Ten Years To Get Relief, But Tanlac Is Only Thing That Helped Him.

One of the latest to testify regarding the powers of Tanlac, the celebrated medicine which has been accomplishing such remarkable results, is James J. Beasley, 102 Elmwood Avenue, Rochester, New York. Mr. Beasley has been chief record keeper for the Department of Water Works, city of Rochester, for thirty years and is a well known and highly respected citizen. In referring to the remarkable recovery of his health by the use of Tanlac, Mr. Beasley said: "I have been trying for ten years to find relief from a case of dyspepsia. Nothing ever helped me to amount to anything until I got Tanlac. This is saying a great deal, for I did everything it seems that a man could do to find relief. Of course, I was hardly ever sick enough to go to bed and was most always able to keep going, but I just never felt right. At times during those ten years, my stomach would become sour like vinegar. I would have an uncomfortable bloated feeling after eating that would last for hours. I suffered a great deal from nausea. At times my heart would flutter and palpitate and I would become alarmed over my condition. My nerves were on edge all the time, and I became irritable, nervous and restless. I had no strength or energy to do anything. In fact I wasn't like myself at all. Even a week or two ago it was an effort for me to get out of my chair and I felt as stiff and clumsy as an 'old work horse.'

"It is really remarkable what Tanlac has accomplished in my case. It has relieved me entirely of indigestion. I never have that distressing feeling any more after eating, and I feel perfectly fine in every way. I will always feel grateful for what this wonderful medicine has done for me and I am only too glad to give it my heartiest endorsement." Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

POOR INCUBATOR BAD INVESTMENT

Advisable to Buy Machine Used With Best Success in Immediate Neighborhood.

DETERMINE SIZE BY NEEDS

Special Cellar or Incubator House Should Be Provided If Equipment Is Extensive—Important to Keep Air Fresh.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

After the poultryman has made up his mind to buy an incubator, he is confronted with the question of makes and sizes. As a general rule, a cheap machine is a poor investment, requiring more attention than a good one and wearing out quicker besides being less dependable. The value of the machine is small compared with that of the eggs used during the normal life of an incubator. It is poor economy, therefore, to buy a machine which is not reliable. Whenever possible it is well to select the kind of incubator that has given satisfaction in your neighborhood, so that you may get the benefit of the experience of other operators near by.

Varies With Needs.

The best size of incubator to buy varies with numerous circumstances, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. About as much time is required to care for a 60 as for a 360-egg machine; it is usually advisable to get one of at least 150-egg capacity. Special conditions, though, often exist which make smaller machines valuable.

A small machine is often used in connection with a larger one, all eggs being placed in the large machine after the first or second test. Many poultrymen believe that it pays to have an incubator large enough to hatch the bulk of their stock in two or three hatches, so that much time is saved in tending to the incubators and brooders. In addition the chickens are more uniform in size than those hatched when the incubating period extends over a longer time.

A fair estimate for a poultry farm is an incubator of one-egg capacity per hen, provided that about one-half of the flock is to be renewed yearly and no outside hatching is carried on. The larger machines cost less in proportion to their capacity than the smaller ones.

Good Results in Cellars.

Incubators are operated in a great variety of places with success. Where only a few small machines are used they are usually located in a room or the cellar of the house. A special cellar or incubator house should be provided if the incubator equipment is extensive or if mammoth machines are

BIRDS AID GREATLY IN WAR ON INSECTS

Of 27 Species Examined 25 Were Grasshopper Eaters.

Farmer Should Form Defensive Alliance With Aerial Cavalry to Obtain Necessary Protection Against Enemies.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Special investigations to find how far the various bird species aid mankind in his perpetual war on insect enemies are being carried on by the bureau of biological survey, United States Department of Agriculture. In the western states the grasshopper is particularly troublesome, so far as the farmer and the ranch owner are concerned. Specialists found that of 27 species of birds examined 25 were grasshopper eaters. In 19 of the species all of the individuals collected had given grasshoppers place on their menu. The birds having the best records were the lark sparrows, meadowlarks, Franklin gulls, Arkansas kingbird, crow blackbird, and the common kingbird.

Probably there are not birds enough in the country to clean up a full-strength invasion of grasshoppers such as the western farmers have come to dread, it is said, but the birds assist materially in the efforts made by man to control the pest.

Specialists say that poisoning campaigns are among the best weapons used against the grasshopper. From time to time reports are sent in, saying that many birds have fallen victim to the poisoned mixtures placed for the insects. Such charges were associated with the gypsy-moth spraying campaign in New England and with the laying of poisoned mashes for cut worms and other insects. Careful observation, made by experts, shows that the bird losses from such causes are insignificant. Some birds, it is said, are not harmed at all by the presence of poison placed for insects or vermin; the quail in California were not harmed by the baits that were set out to kill ground squirrels—though the campaign was a general one and was conducted with much intensity. In the Dakotas a few birds succumbed to the arsenic mashes placed for grasshoppers, but the number killed was so slight as to be of no consequence, it is said.

By killing stray cats and chasing off unscrupulous hunters the farmer can become a party to a sort of defensive alliance with his birds, so that when his crops need protection against insect enemies he will have a squadron of aerial cavalry to help him repulse the raid, specialists say.

SEED-TESTING PLEASES BOY

Work Is Admirably Adapted for School Room—Equipment Necessary Is Inexpensive.

In order to prevent Jack from becoming a dull boy as a result of all work and no play, many hours can be spent profitably in the schoolroom by forgetting books and lessons for a time and testing seeds. Seed testing is a diversion that is as practical as it is enjoyable. It is admirably adapted for exercise work in every schoolroom whether or not a systematic course in agriculture is given. Little equipment is necessary. A study of samples of farm seed to be sown by the pupils' parents, to determine the percentage of germination and the extent of impurities in the seed, offers a means of connecting the school with the home with benefits to both. Impurity tests can be made by an examination with a magnifying glass. The only apparatus necessary for germination tests of small seed consists of two plates, and a piece of blotting paper. Write to the United States Department of Agriculture for Farmers' Bulletin 428, "Testing Farm Seeds in the Home and in the Rural School." It gives complete directions.

Important to all Women Readers of this Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, head, ache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Adv.

Feel All Worn Out?

Has a cold, grip, or other infectious disease sapped your strength? Do you suffer backache, lack ambition, feel dull and depressed? Look to your kidneys! Physicians agree that kidney trouble often results from infectious disease. Too often the kidneys are neglected because the sufferer doesn't realize they have broken down under the strain of filtering disease-created poisons from the blood. If your back is bad, your kidneys act irregularly, and you feel all run down, use Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands. Ask your neighbor!

DON'T MISS THIS

Don't fail to attend the big fair at Paradise church which will continue all this week. A good time is in store for everybody who attends. By popular request, the drama "Valley Farm" will be repeated on Wednesday and Saturday evenings (8 o'- clock), April 27th and 30th. You should not miss seeing this play which has been highly praised by all who have been present. There will be a musical program every evening.

Harold, 2-year-old son of Mr. and
Mrs. Floyd Detter, of near Wellsville,
was seriously injured at noon Friday,
when a runaway team of horses
hitched to a steel roller, dashed thru
a field and across the farm yard,
where the child was playing. The roller passed over the child, injuring him internally, and inflicting bruises
and abrasions of the head and shoulder. The horses dashed on and were stopped when they came in contact with a dwelling. The tongue of the roller plunged through a window of the house, tearing the entire frame
out. The horses are young and fractions and became frightened at the
noise of the roller, tearing the lines
from Mr. Detter's hands.

Mrs. Mary A. Gilbert, 150 W. Mid-

health was in a bad condition for some time, caused by disordered kid-and what rest I got didn't seem to refresh me. My back and head ached and frequently I'd get dizzy spells

CAVE 11 BOGUS CHECKS

As the result of forming the exceedingly bad habit of passing bogus checks, Ivan C. Sentz, aged about 30, of Bonneauville, was lodged in the Adams county jail Thursday evening by Sheriff Hartman. John O. Adams, Littlestown restaurant keeper, is the latest man to complain against Sentz. He told Charles H. Mayers, Littlestown justice of the peace, Thursday afternoon that Sentz had given him a worthless check. "Squire Mayers summoned Sheriff Hartman who conveyed Sentz to jail. According to the authorities Sentz has passed no less than eleven bad checks in the past several months without seeming to realize that in each instance he was committing a serious offense.

The Bonneauville man has been in financial straits for some time, according to men acquainted with his case. He failed in a venture as a tractor salesman and then started the practice of writing checks for many times more than the amount of money he had. About two months ago Sentz was taken to Gettysburg on the charge of passing a bogus check for $33 on the Farmers & Merchants bank of New Oxford. He appeared before Squire Hill on that charge and for operating a motor vehicle without a license and was released on $500 bail. That bail incidentally was furnished by E. A. Melhorn, Bonneauville garage owner, who, it was later revealed, had previously fallen a victim to Sentz's habit. Even after Mr. Melhorn was forced to make good a sum in the First National bank, Gettysburg, on Sentz's account, he provided the $500 bail.

Sentz, according to the authorities, then commenced the practice of putting small sums in various banks and giving out checks for sums three and four times in excess of the amounts he deposited. The result was that he became to be generally known as a bogus check passer. One of the tricks, it is said, was to hire a man to move his belongings from one place to another and then give him a bad check for his work. Why the Bonneauville man persisted in the practice is a mystery to the local authorities who consider him a man presenting rather a bright appearance. Just how many men will appear before him to press charges has not been determined.

SKIDS OVER EMBANKMENT

Skidding on the wet surface of the Lincoln highway, about a mile east of Abbottstown, on Friday afternoon about 3 o'clock, the Buick coupe driven by J. E. Phillips, York, went over a 15 foot embankment near a bridge and turned over on its side. Mr. Phillips and daughter, who accompanied him, were thrown out into the meadow but escaped injury. The car was slightly damaged and hung along side of the bank until late in the day when it was taken to York. The highway was wet and slippery from a thunder storm which swept over the eastern part of the county about that time.

 DIAGNOSTICIAN

The Dr. Fahrneys have been practicing medicine and have made a specialty of chronic diseases for over 100 years. I am working only with chronic diseases—bad kinds—difficult cases—and I diagnose your case before I treat you. If you have a trouble or weakness or deformity, write to me and I'll study your case and give satisfaction.

MAN'S FACE SHATTERED
 Nelson Stauffer, 59 years old, of Baresville, near Hanover, narrowly escaped death Monday afternoon when he was kicked by a mule, the force of the blow caving in the right side of his face. The upper jaw bone was smashed into tiny bits, the right cheek cut to the bone and laid open from the mouth to the eye, the nose was broken, and the lining of the mouth torn. The unfortunate man was wearing a set of false teeth, and the plate was driven into his throat and broken. It is believed that the traces twisted and linked, and that he stepped between the animals to adjust the traces, when one of the mules struck out with his hind feet. The patient was taken to the West Side sanatorium, York.

Ruth, 17-year-old daughter of Henry Smyser, was found dead Sunday afternoon, sitting upright in a chair at her home at Rudy's mill, East Manchester township, apparently looking out the window. Miss Smyser was in her usual health and had not been heard to complain.

BIG RACING MATINEE
 The annual York Springs Racing Matinee will be held Ascension Day, May 5, 1921. You will see a good racing card, and hear a musical treat, and there will be other amusements afternoon and evening. If the program should be postponed on account of rain the full program will be held on Decoration Day, May 30, 1921.

Losing his balance when seated on a window ledge on the second floor of a dormitory at Gettysburg college, Richard Smith, aged 19 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Smith, York, plunged head first to a brick pavement Friday night, sustaining a badly sprained left wrist, a deep gash on the chin and other injuries. His escape from more serious injury is regarded as miraculous. He left for Philadelphia to have an X-ray taken of his jaw.

Three men in a truck early Friday morning robbed the Woolworth 5c and 10c store, Columbia, carrying away the heavy iron safe. The store stands on the principal street in the town.

"ALWAYS RELIABLE"

LAXATIVE for Aged People

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

HOSPITAL GRANTED $5,000

An appropriation of $5,000 for the next two years has been granted the Annie M. Warner Hospital by the House Appropriations Committee, says a Harrisburg report. While this action does not complete the transaction it is believed the amount will be approved by the Governor. The bill presented by Dr. Eugene Elgin, Representative from this district, for an appropriation of $12,000 was introduced in the Legislature after the State Board of Charities had failed in securing a grant for the local hospital. Other institutions in this section and the grants they received are: Paradise Protectors, York county, $9,000; York Hospital, $30,000; York Society to Protect Children and Aged Persons $12,000.

Preventative Medicine.—The tendency of medical science is toward preventative measures. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. Pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, often follows a cold or attack of the grip. The cold prepares the system for the reception and development of the pneumonia germ. The longer the cold hangs on, the the greater the danger. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the first indications of a cold appears so as to get rid of it with the least possible delay. It is folly to risk an attack of pneumonia when this remedy may be obtained for a trifle.

BOY SUFFOCATES IN WHEAT

At the West Fayetteville elevator, Charles, 12-year-old son of Charles Branthaver, one of the firm operating the elevator, was suffocated in a bin of wheat and died as his body was released. The lad had been helping shovel wheat in the third floor of the elevator, and, going to a large storage bin holding 600 bushels of wheat, began playing in it. The wheat started to shift and engulfed the boy, who tried to climb out, but sank deeper as in a quicksand. He called for help and his father and others ran to him as he sank. His father caught his hand stretched above the grain and held on while men frantically shoveled the wheat trying to save the boy. Dr. Samuel Shull, summoned from town, raced his car to the scene and found the boy still living, but with his head under the grain. Men with axes cut the lower part of the bin and the wheat ran out and the boy was released, but died after a gasp or two. His respiratory organs were filled with grains of wheat, causing a fatal hemorrhage. His mother and a brother arrived at the elevator in their car just as the body was taken away.

"A man living on a farm near here came in a short time ago completely doubled up with rheumatism. I handed him a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment and told him to use it freely," says C. P. "A few days later he walked into the store as straight as a string and handed me a dollar saying give me another bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment; I want it in the house all the time for it cured me."

Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

That Dependable Ford Quality

FORD durability began back in 1903 when Henry Ford started experimenting with Vanadium steel and heat-treating processes. He knew that a more exact tempering of steel for motor car building must be worked out. Vanadium, it was learned, when added to molten steel, gives to that steel a greater toughness and adhesiveness. And now other alloys have been found which are superior to Vanadium. With the Ford Motor Company constant progress is the daily companion. The Ford products—Car, Truck, Tractor—grow in quality. Heat-treating tempers each part so that it will best withstand the wear or tear to which it is subjected. Ford chemists and analysts have created formulas and standard specifications for every individual part of the Ford car—not only for the steel but for everything from pneumatic tires to top.

Ford durability isn't a matter of accident, it is a matter of painstaking thoroughness in laboratory and factory. The Ford is a car of precision—of standardized values. Order your Ford car now. No matter how fast they may be made the demand multiplies faster. Order today for we can make fairly prompt deliveries—Runabout, Touring Car, Coupe, Sedan, Truck and Fordson Tractor.

Relates Burial of Washington

Fake Ulster County Gazette Most Noted Newspaper Forgery of Country.

NO GENUINE COPY KNOWN

Library Officials Doubt If There Is Genuine Copy of Newspaper of That Date in Existence—Forgery Is Easily Proven.

Chicago. — Perennially and usually about this time copies of the most noted newspaper forgery of the country — the Ulster County Gazette of January 4, 1800, with its account of Washington's funeral—comes to light. The only other newspaper imitation of the kind that compares in the duplication of the Vicksburg Citizen, printed on wall paper during the siege in 1862. "I doubt if there is a genuine copy of the Ulster County Gazette of that date in existence," Edward A. Henry, who is in charge of the University of Chicago's collection of old newspapers, said. "At any rate, I have never seen one, nor do I know of anybody who has."

"Wilberforce Eames of the New York public library told me half a dozen years ago that he had made the most careful examinations of copies of the Gazette submitted to him as genuine—even to chemical analysis of the paper—and had almost come to the conclusion that there never was an original."

26 Different Editions.

"At the Library of Congress I was told they had 26 different editions. The New York public library lists nine in its latest catalog. We have three, each different from the other."

"I suppose there was once a genuine Ulster County Gazette of the date named, from which all these subsequent copies have been made. The fact that the Wisconsin State Historical society, which has the largest collection of old newspapers in the Middle West, lists two copies of an Ulster Gazette for August 18 and September 22, 1804, strengthens this belief."

"The account of Washington's funeral is accurate and interesting. No fault can be found on that score, although I think reports of the funeral in other papers of the same time are in several instances still more striking."

"It may have been that many years after the funeral some printer probably in the vicinity of New York, for Kingston, Ulster county, is on the Hudson, thought to produce something of interest to others and profit to himself by making a facsimile of an original account. Had he taken a New York paper, the duplication could have been instantly detected and perhaps for this reason the obscure Ulster county paper was made to serve.

Trick Went Well.

"The trick evidently went well, and perhaps it was this same printer that put out many of the subsequent editions. That is all supposition of course, but there is no doubt of the multitude of editions. Their genuineness only an expert can pass on in most cases. The test is the paper. Most of these copies were made before 1850, but not early enough to have used the fine linen rag paper of 1800. That soft paper will be good for many hundred years yet, while the earliest Ulster County Gazette we have is already badly discolored."

"Variations are found in the printing of the different editions of the same date. In two of our copies the name of the paper is set in italics; in the other it is not. The enterprising publisher of the newest of our forgeries added the word 'copyright.'"

Make Big Hit at Peru

American Jackies Thoroughly at Home in Lima, the Capital.

Cafe Managers Find It Saves Trouble to Have Bill Agree With Menu Prices and Change Correct.

Calla.—A strange language, a still more puzzling currency and exchange rate and a strike of chauffeurs and coach drivers during the Atlantic fleet's visit to Peru did not prevent American sailors from filtering into every nook and cranny of Lima, seven miles from this port, from the humblest saloon to the cathedral.

They may have lost a little in exchange or paid more for a meal than the average Peruvian, but the smiling storekeeper and cafe manager found it saved them time and trouble to have their bill agree with menu prices and their change correct. For instance:

In one of the best hotels a tanned bos'un called for the bill for himself and three companions.

"No," he declared, "it's too much," as the waiter laid down a bit of paper with a column of figures on it.

"How do you know it's too much; you haven't looked at it yet?" one of his friends remonstrated.

"It's always too much the first time," the bos'un replied without moving his hand from the pile of Peruvian currency he had placed on the table. "I've been in France, and I know."

A long argument ensued in English by the sailor and Spanish by the waiter.

The head waiter came, tried his ten

RAID VIENNA PRIVATE BANKS

Vienna.—The wild speculation in foreign moneys here has caused renewed activity on the part of the police in raiding "exchange coffee houses" and private banks. The price of the milk of human kindness has not advanced. It is still free, but not always to be had.—Deseret News.

YOU WILL LIKE TO TRY THESE.

THOSE who are fond of green peppers will like to try

Green Peppers Stuffed With Rice.
Take six small even sized green peppers, cut in halves lengthwise, wash and remove all seeds and white fiber. Scald with boiling water, boil three minutes, then drain. Boil rice in salted water until tender, using one-half cupful. Drain rice, add two tablespoonfuls of butter, one fourth of a teaspoonful of poultry seasoning, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, or more to taste, one egg, and beat and mix well. Fill the pepper shells. Put one-fourth of a cupful of bacon fat, or four slices of bacon in the pan, bake until firm and lightly browned, using the bacon fat for basting. Serve with lamb fricassee.

Hot Water Ginger Bread.

Take one cupful each of sugar and molasses, one-half cupful of melted fat, one egg beaten, a teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of ginger, three cupfuls of sifted flour, and when all are well mixed add a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one cupful of boiling water. Stir until smooth, pour into a well greased dripping pan and bake 40 minutes in a moderate oven.

Currant Bread.

Take two cupfuls of light bread sponge and work into it one-half cupful of butter and the same of sugar, which have been creamed together. Add one cupful of currants or two tablespoonfuls of caraway seeds. Let rise in a loaf. When light bake in a moderate oven. This is nice to serve with tea.

Buttermilk Custard Pie.

Cream a tablespoonful of butter with one cupful of sugar, add the beaten yolks of three eggs and stir in one cupful of fresh thick buttermilk; add one-half teaspoonful of vanilla and fold in the egg whites beaten stiff. Pour into a deep plate lined with pastry and bake one hour.

Fruit Punch.

Make a sirup of one cupful each of sugar and water, cool and add the juice of an orange, the juice of two lemons, one-half cupful of apricot juice, one-fourth cupful each of prune and cherry juice; add two quarts of water and pieces of ice; garnish with cherries. This recipe makes two and a half quarts.

LIFE.

MAN, thrust upon the world, awakes from sleep. Knowing not whence he came nor how nor why. His earliest impulse is an infant cry. His final privilege is that to weep.

A combatant although he sought no strife. A guest unwelcome come unwillingly. Given his vision that he may not see, He names this unnamed paradox his life.

He learns to walk the forest and to love Its green and brown, its song and season's change. Yet will not taste a berry that is strange Or tread a pathway that he knows not of.

Skeptic and doubter of the flow'r and tree, He questions this and that invest-gates— Yet drinks the beaker offered by the fates And leaves unsolved the greater mystery.

CONTENT; DISCONTENT

"The toad beneath the harrow knows Exactly where each tooth point goes. The butterfly upon the road Preaches contentment to that toad."

NOT all of Kipling's best poetry is printed in large type. Some of it appears in the smaller characters when it precedes verses which the author thought were more important.

That is the case with the lines printed above which in the bound volume serve as an introduction to "Pagett, M. P."

But one need not be a butterfly to preach contentment. There is many a man and woman living far from a butterfly life that preach contentment in the most forcible and convincing way, which is by example.

Discontent is very contradictory in its results. It has been responsible for innumerable failures. It has been the most forcible factor in the greatest of the world's revolutions and reformations.

Get a man or a nation thoroughly discontented with surroundings, with laws, with government and there is bound to be a change.

Discontent has played a considerable factor in the history of America.

It was discontent, dissatisfaction means the same thing, with the means of communication with the rest of the world that led Columbus to sail out into the mysteries of the Western oceans.

It was discontent with the religious restriction of their home country that led the Pilgrims to sail for Plymouth.

It was discontent with the laws under which they were living that led the fathers of this country to rid themselves of the English yoke and become a free and independent people.

In any one of these instances contentment would have been the worst thing that could have happened to America, the worst condition that could have obtained. It would have stifled progress and hindered the advancement of the whole world.

But where discontent is useful once it is harmful a thousand times because it is for the most part badly based.

Are you discontented with your home? Nine times out of ten your home could be made better if you really wanted to exert yourself to make it better.

Are you discontented with your job?

Ninety-nine times out of a hundred you are not making half as much of your job as you ought to.

You are not taking interest enough in it. You are not trying to make yourself and your job bigger and better.

Try it for a few days and see if contentment is not the result.

Are you discontented with your government? Some writer has set down the truth that "every people is as well governed as it deserves to be." In other words, if your government is not right and just and if under it you suffer without reason, then you and others who suffer are to blame for not changing it by proper means and lawful and orderly procedure.

Breaking a law never bettered a law.

Contentment is the world's greatest preventive of gray hair and wrinkles. It is the best preservative of youth and happiness. It is the most wonderful antidote for an ill nature or a crabbed disposition.

Cultivate contentment with every thing good. Encourage contentment with what is impossible of change.

Be discontented only with what is unjust and do not be contented until the wrong has been righted.

The toad, if he dodges all the harrow's teeth, is after all not so badly off. The exercise doubtless does him good.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"RENIG"

USED by whist and euchre players to signify a revoke or failure to play a card of the suit called for, the word "renig" is properly spelled "renege" and is the Old English verb meaning to refuse, renounce or deny. It probably crept into whist from the older game of "spoils-five" which, with its variations of "twenty-five" and "forty-five" is still played in the British army and in many parts of Ireland. In this game the player is permitted to renig (or to deny the suit) when holding certain cards. Here the word retains its original meaning, though its synonym "revoke" is not so easy to trace.

The word "renege" is twice used by Shakespeare, once in "Anthony and Cleopatra" and once in "King Lear" and is occasionally found in the works of other writers of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries. Chaucer uses the form reneys, evidently from the French renier which, in turn, is derived from the Latin renegare, the root-word of "renegade" and other English derivatives.

THE GIRL ON THE JOB

How to Succeed—How to Get Ahead

How to Make Good

By JESSIE ROBERTS

WOMEN'S INTERESTS

THERE is perhaps no surer way of discovering just how the interests and the opportunities of woman have broadened in the last very few years than to study the women's magazines. The business woman is carefully considered today in these publications. Her training, her chances of success, new fields where she may try for positions; these are exploited. There are articles on subjects that would never have been touched upon five or six years ago, or even two or three years ago.

Finance is another department that has shown tremendous development in such magazines. Women are learning to manage their own funds, and when the women's colleges run successful campaigns for great sums, as they do now, and invest and disburse such sums, the day when woman was not supposed to understand the money market is indeed gone.

Naturally the coming of the vote to women has brought a lot of political material into these pages. The work women can do in politics, her responsibilities, clear expositions of what the different political parties stand for, these are some of the directions in which expansion is shown. Women want to know a whole lot of things that they did not, as a class, care about only a short time ago. And what women want, they get.

There is hardly a limit to what the well-trained, clever, ambitious girls may expect of life in the way of service, interesting work, a good income, independence, influence on the future of her country, and a full home life. It is truly, today, up to her.

Japs Lose a Million

Census of 1920 Shows Big Decrease in Population.

Practically Every City Shows a Big Drop as Compared With Incorrect Figures of 1918.

Tokyo. — Population figures that prove the population of the Japanese empire over 1,000,000 less than it was estimated in 1918 were given out by the bureau of national power investigation here recently. Practically every city shows a large decrease as compared with the incorrect figures of 1918, Tokyo alone being 190,000 less than its semi-official figures indicated.

The population of the empire, according to these figures, which are the result of months of labor on the part of the bureau officials, is 77,005,510; that of Japan proper, exclusive of Korea, Formosa and Saghalien, 55,961,140.

Both of these figures are less by more than a million than the figures given in 1918. The population of the empire, then estimated from a compilation of old registers, was given at 78,261,850, or 1,255,340 more than the census of 1920 gives. The decrease for the Japanese empire, therefore, is 1.6 per cent.

Thus Japan, by its first modern census, for the 1920 figures are the first made along modern lines of investigation, fails to bear out its story of ever increasing population which is literally driving the nation to seek new lands in Asia and send its immigrants out into the far corners of the earth.

Since the fall of the Tokugawas it has been customary to compile all census records from old registers and it has been known for some time that duplications were not only apt to creep in, but that they had come to be the customary thing.

According to the new figures, there are 128,850 more males than females in Japan proper. The total number of families in Japan proper is 11,222,053.

Tokyo, Osaka and Kobe rank the first three cities of the empire in the list of statistics.

Joined Church; Restored Bill Taken Years Before

A $5 bill, that had been carried for 25 years by a man to whom a Portland (Me.) merchant gave two bills instead of one in making change, was returned to the merchant a few days ago. The man explained that his conscience had troubled him so that he had feared to spend the money, and recently, when he had joined a church, he felt impelled to return it.

III. THE TRAP—Continued.

Priscilla began to get her bearings, finding herself in that sordid room where she had witnessed the meeting of Leonora and Inez, beside the insistent body of the drug fiend, on the night of the storm. She reviewed after face known to her through the associations of her dreams; English Eddie, heavy, florid and flashy; Charlie the Coke, ghastly of face, shifty-eyed, with his frail, racked body and spasmodic gestures; Inez with elbows planted on the table, a sullen face clamped between two fists; at her side, the Nut, to whose presence nothing of his upturn elegance adhered but the handiwork of his excellent tailor, laboring under the burden of a new part, self-assumed, his bottle neck shoulders wearing with poor grace the mantle of Red Carnehan, master of gunmen; three or four others, remembered as lesser limbs of Red's gang.

The company sat in silence, staring at Nora with unfriendly, inquisitive eyes. Precisely so had Leonora on that occasion faced a prejudiced jury of her kind. Only the setting was slightly different, the company decimated, its presiding spirit gone beyond recall.

The pause lasted longer than the patience of Inez. She sat up suddenly and waved an extravagant arm, mimicking the manner of bally-hoo before a circus side show.

"Ladeez and wempnum!" she proclaimed in a flat professional bawl: "I have the honor to present to you tonight the only certified Two-in-One in captivity—Miss Priscilla Maine, the latest fashion hint from Fifth Avenue, and plain Nora O'More of this club. Take a good look, ladeez and wempnum, at this peerless freak, the only livin' Two of a Kind. A single price of admission pays for both—one dime, the tenth part of a dollar—and your money back if y'aint satisfied!"

IV. RESURRECTION.

Somebody chuckled hoarsely. Chairs were shifted. Asides were exchanged in audible murmurs. A contemptuous voice declared loudly: "It's Nora, all right, all right!" The Nut bent his mouth to murmur into the ear of Inez something apparently in the nature of a remonstrance. She heard him with a surly face, growled a response which seemed to irritate him exceedingly, and turned scornfully away. English Eddie alone changed neither his pose nor the moderately dubious expression with which she was regarding Priscilla.

The latter, drawing upon an unexpected store of latent spirit, moved forward to the edge of the table.

"My name is Priscilla Maine," she uttered with difficulty. "I—I—"

"My Gawd!" Inez commented dramatically—"she admits it!"

"Please!" Priscilla pleaded—"I can hardly speak—give me something to drink—water."

English Eddie sat forward sharply and squirted siphon water into a glass. "A drop of brandy, dearie?"

"Ladeez and wempnum!" She proclaimed in a Flat, Professional Bawl.

she suggested in a tone not unkind. Priscilla shook her head. "You'd better," the woman insisted; "you need it." She tilted a bottle over the glass, coloring the water with the liquor. Despairing of getting what she wanted, too thirsty to permit of long hesitation, Priscilla put the glass to her lips and drank.

"Everybody sit tight," Inez warned; "the big bank act is about to commence."

Priscilla lowered the glass, nodded her thanks to the English woman, and with something remotely resembling defiance again confronted her captors. "I am Priscilla Maine," she stated for the second time. "What do you want with me?"

The Nut tipped his chair back and eyed her quizzically. "An even break," he replied.

"And no more shenanigan," Inez supplemented.

Priscilla looked blank. "I don't understand."

"Ah—cut out the stallin'!" Inez flared. "I'm gettin' sick of your airs and everythin'!"

"I don't understand," Priscilla repeated patiently, ignoring the interruption. "I'm not the woman you believe me to be." She addressed herself directly to Harry: "I told you that this afternoon. If you had made the inquiries I asked you to, you could have satisfied yourself I was telling the truth. As it is, you have done this thing—kidnaped me—laid yourself open to the law."

"We'll take our chances with the law," Inez put in, sardonically. "But don't mind me; you intrust us strangely. Go on, go on."

"But even if I were Leonora—assume that I am—what do you want with me?"

"An even break," Harry iterated—"fair play and no more stalling."

"Please explain what you mean—and let me go."

"Fat chance," Inez commented.

"I am ill, unfit to stand on my feet or talk to you—but if you will only let me go, I promise to keep this outrage to myself. The police need never know if—"

"You can go, maybe," Harry responded—"when we've come to an understanding and you've satisfied us you'll act in good faith and not try any more foolishness."

"Won't you please explain?"

"Ah! You know perfectly well—!" Inez began.

With a sharp explosion of temper Harry silenced her. "Be quiet! If you want us to get anywhere with this talk—keep quiet. If you go on like this, you'll only make her stubborn."

"That's right," English Eddie advised. "Give Nora a chance, dearie."

Inez meditated mutely, thought better of it, subsided into a fit of sulks.

"I'm sure it's simple enough," Harry proceeded loftily, with something of the condescension of one humoring a wilful child—"I'm sure you understand what we want, Nora; but if you insist I'll try to put it in words of one syllable. . . . We're all old pals of yours, and we feel we've got a right to be let in on the ground floor when you've struck it rich like you have. We want a chance to work in with you and cop out something for ourselves. You've got the inside track now—God knows how you worked it, but you did—"

"You've got it, you can go where you want and do about as you please with the Ritz mob. And that makes it simple for you to open things up for us. You know what we can do, each one of us; you can easily slip us a tip now and then and leave the rest to us. All I ask for myself, for instance, is a few introductions. I'll take care of the rest."

"I think you must be mad!" Priscilla's head was swimming again. "Was it to tell me this that you—"

"Precisely," Harry assented with an amiable nod.

For an instant she was dumb with the vertigo beginning to pass, and with it the fear of fainting again; she found fresh confidence and was visited by an inspiration of cunning.

"If I refuse—?"

"You'll get twenty-four hours to think it over," the Nut replied. "If by that time you're still stubborn . . ."

"And if I agree?"

"We'll put our heads together and scheme out a working arrangement."

"But, I'm too ill tonight . . ."

A gleam dawned in the ugly little eyes of the Nut.

"That sounds like you mean to come down to earth."

Priscilla inclined her head: "I will do what you wish—"

"Sensible young woman!"

"But I'm unable to discuss details tonight."

"You can go back and lie down till you feel stronger."

"No. I can't stay here. You must let me go home."

Inez laughed aloud.

"Hardly, my dear," Harry said. "You won't get another chance to give me the slip until the cases are all framed, and I'm satisfied you won't dare try it again."

"You'll have to take my word sometime—now or later."

"Sorry—no can do."

English Eddie interposed: "But we all know Leonora never went back on her word."

"Never," Priscilla affirmed; and had wit enough to refrain from throwing a look of gratitude to this new-found ally.

"Ah, for Gawd's sake!" Inez protested in disgust. "You make me weary. If you think you can trust that double-faced cat any further'n you can see her—!"

"I don't ask you to trust me," Priscilla explained—"only to give me time to rest in quiet and comfort—not here—before we go into our plans. And you need not trust me. I'm willing that one of you shall come with me and see that I play fair. You can trust Eddie . . ."

"That's perfectly fair," the English woman insisted. "I'll go with Nora, and you know me well enough to know she won't lift 'er 'and without me seein' it."

"All right," the Nut conceded. "Take Eddie home with you and give me your word you'll be ready to see me at eleven tomorrow—"

Inez founced to her feet in a rage. "You pack of poor boobies!" she shrieked. "Can't you see she's only frammin' to slip you the double cross—and you all helpin' her!"

"Only one thing more," Priscilla insisted, as if she had not heard. "I must have my things back—my suit, my blouse, my jewelry."

"Hello!" Harry sat forward, eyeing her sharply. "Thought you looked different. What's become of your clothes?"

Priscilla's nod indicated Inez. "She stole them from me. Make her give them back."

The Nut turned to Inez, scowling blackly. "Give them back—"

"Yes, I will—not. I got a bromide enlargement of me bel'n' such a simp."

"You'll do as I say," Harry insisted darkly. "I'm runnin' this show—"

"You are—like h—!"

The girl's defiance found an echo in a new voice at the back of the room.

"Like h—! is right!"

There was a concerted turning of startled heads.

The door had opened noiselessly. It framed the figure of a man wearing a greasy red sweater hiked up at either hip to permit his hands to remain in the pockets of a pair of tattered, frayed and stained khaki trousers. His pose was rudely nonchalant. A cap of gray cloth pulled forward shadowed his eyes; but the face stamped with an evil, mirthless grin, was unmistakable.

After a moment's relish of the dramatic sensation effected by his unheralded resurrection, Red Carnehan slouched in, closed the door with a kick of his heel, and put his shoulders to it.

"It'll take a smarter gun'n you are or ever will be, Harry," he asserted in a blurred voice of arrogance, "to boss this bunch as long's I'm on top of the map."

V. THE HAUNTED MAN.

Stupefied silence held till shattered by a laugh of uncouth joy.

"Red!" Inez cried, jumping up and overturning her chair. "Red Carnehan! My Gawd, Red, you've come back!"

"I'll say I have."

Grimacing, the gunman slouched toward the table.

They crowded about Carnehan, shaking his hands, slapping his back, screaming and bellowing a hundred phrases of congratulation, delight, and amazement, together with questions innumerable. He suffered the ovation, laughing, greeting each by name, yielding his hands to one after another.

Then, without warning he began to strike down the fawning hands and thrust his way through the group toward the table.

"Lay off me!" he snarled. "Lay off—ginime air! I'll bean the next guy what puts his hands onto me! Lay off!"

"But Red!" Eddie protested—"we thought you was dead!"

"You wasn't far wrong, at that," Carnehan seized the brandy bottle and chattered its neck against a glass into which he spilled the raw spirit lavishly. The drink at his lips, his gaze, roving above the brim, discovered and was transfixed by the pale, set face of Priscilla. He started violently. As if an invisible but mighty hand had struck him a crashing blow, he staggered back, lost his footing, brought up heavily against the table. Bottle and glass, escaping his palsied grasp, crashed to the floor. In a fluttering breath the blood drained from his face, and left it livid, leaden and blue. His widened eyes were fixed in horror.

"What's 'at?" Broken words brushed his stiff lips. "What's 'at?" He lifted a shaking arm and singled out Priscilla. His voice became a scream: "Name of Gawd! somebody tell me—what's 'at there?"

The Nut dropped a soothing hand upon his shoulder.

"Why, Red—it's Nora!"

"Nora?" the gunman chattered. "I know it's Nora! But what's it doin' here?"

"But, Red!"—in alarm English Eddie ranged up on his other side and laid hold of his arm—"why shouldn't Nora be here?"

"Why?" He glared madly at the woman. "Why, 'cause she's dead."

"But, Red—!"

"Dead, I tell you! I guess I oughta know. Didn't I croak her meself, up there in the woods, yest'day aft'noon?"

He seemed to realize what he had said and tried to cover it with hysterical protest. "No; that's a lie! Who said I croaked her! I never, she done it herself, it was all an accident! I tell you I didn't have nothin' to do with it—her foot slipped and she went over the edge before I could catch her, and I seen her drown! I couldn't help her, I don't know how to swim, I'd've pulled her out if I had! It wasn't my fault—I swear to Gawd it was all an accident!"

"But, Red—you're off your nut!"

Addie reasoned. "Nora couldn't be dead and here at the same time—"

"She is dead! Didn't I see her drown meself? Gawd! I ain't seen nothin' since but her face when she went under, I ain't heard nothin' but her beggin' me not to . . ."

He stammered into incoherence, his chin sunk upon his breast, he glared at Priscilla with the look of a lunatic. Abruptly he roused, wild of eye, features working insanely, and threw off the hands of Addie and the Nut.

"Lemme loose!" he screamed. "Lemme loose! I croaked her once, but if once ain't enough, I'll croak her again and make it sure, the—"

Epithets unspeakably vile fell like loads from his slaving mouth. He tugged at a pocket of his trousers—and suddenly an automatic pistol was wavering in his hand. With a choking cry, Priscilla cowered, throwing both hands out to shield her face. The Nut and Addie fell upon Carnehan bodily. For a moment it seemed that they might be able to hold him. But he fought with the strength of a maniac. The hold of the English woman was broken first, she was thrown off shrieking for help. The Nut clung desperately to Carnehan's pistol hand, striving to wrest the weapon from him. Then others closed in, Carnehan became the core of a swaying, writhing tangle of bodies.

"Lemme Loose!" He Screamed. "Lemme Loose!"

It was, Priscilla thought, like looking through a peep hole into hell. They fought like wild beasts in a pit, like beasts they growled, yelped, snarled, snapped, howled, roared. A haze of dust, beaten up from the unswept floor by scuffling, shifting, stamping feet, hung in the gas light.

The pistol exploded with a detonation ear-splitting in that confined space.

Priscilla, witless with fright, felt herself seized and urged toward the door.

"Beat it, child—get out of this as quick's you can! I seen from the very first you wasn't Nora!"

She recognized the accent of English Eddie.

In one lithe bound, a crouching shape of malice with a pale face of evil and blazing eyes planted itself before them and blocked the way.

"Keep away from that door!" Inez screamed. "She shan't get away, she shan't! I'll rip her eyes out first!"

She darted clawing hands at Priscilla's face. The bulk of the English woman came between them. In panic Priscilla paved frantically at the door, swung it wide, stumbled out, blundered blindly into the wall where the hallway turned, cannoned off, and somehow found herself before a second door.

An aged Chinaman was guarding it. Dully she remembered having seen him before and wondered would he seek to hinder her. But he seemed unaware of her. He was eyeing impassively the door, which, she discovered, was quivering under a rain of blows on the other side.

Grasping instinctively at the truth, she thrust the guardian unceremoniously aside and began to fumble with the bolts.

Without protest, the Chinaman turned and shuffled off.

The storm of blows continued. The bolts were reluctant to her shaking, untrained fingers. At length, however, the last slid back, she lifted the stout iron latch, the door slammed open.

Three uniformed policemen, armed with pistols and nightsticks, charged in. Seeing the girl, one seized and threw her roughly back against the wall. She gave a cry of pain. A voice she knew protested sharply:

"Let that lady go, officer. She is my wife."

Priscilla turned. Mario was offering her the haven of his arms. She went into them sobbing his name aloud. Other police officers passed them, running.

As readily as though she had been a child, Mario gathered her up and strode down the stairs. Arms round his neck, she clung closely to him. His breath was on her cheek, she was aware of his strength and gentleness. Nestling against his bosom, she was sensible of the unburied, powerful pulsations of his heart.

MORE THINGS TO EAT

Rarebits are emergency dishes which are liked by almost everybody and make a hot dish which may be prepared in a short time.

Mexican Rabbit.—Melt one tablespoonful of butter; in it cook one green pepper cut in squares. When softened a little add one pound of common cheese, cut in small bits, and stir constantly until melted; add two-thirds of a cupful of fresh or canned corn, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one half teaspoonful of paprika, two eggs well beaten and two-thirds of a cupful of tomato. Stir and cook until smooth and well blended, and when thoroughly hot, serve on rounds of toast, toasted on one side. Serve the rabbit on the untoasted side.

Cream of Corn Soup.—Cook one-half of an onion finely minced in four tablespoonfuls of butter until brown. Add four tablespoonfuls of flour, two cupfuls of milk after the flour has been well blended, two teaspoonfuls of salt, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of pepper and one or two bouillon cubes, provided they are not ninety-nine per cent salt; if so, add no salt until after the cubes are added. Sad experience with bouillon cubes should make us wise. Cook until the mixture thickens and add one pint of sweet corn put through a colander. Let the whole boil up once and serve with croutons.

Green Cheese.—Take two ounces of fresh parsley, one ounce of fresh water cress, one ounce of celery. Dry the parsley before the fire until crisp so that it can be crumbled, but not until it has lost its color. Chop the cress and celery, add the crumbled parsley and mix with four ounces of fresh green cheese. Season with cayenne and salt, and put through a colander. Form into small cheeses to pass with the salad.

Another cheese mixture which is a great favorite is cream cheese mixed with a cupful or two of grated American, seasoned with salt and cayenne, adding cream to make the mixture into a smooth roll or into small pats. Decorate with sliced, stuffed olives.

All you have really to do is to keep your back as straight as you can, and not to think about what is on it; above all not to boast of what is on it. The real meaning of virtue is in that straightness of the back.—Ruskin.

MISCELLANEOUS HELPS.

Before putting the beans into the pot to bake, grease the top well down inside and an inch or two on the outside. The pot will wash much easier. Citron or orange or lemon peel may be prepared easily by soaking a few minutes in hot water, then put through the meat grinder.

When baking apples fill the centers with broken bits of walnuts and a spoonful of strained honey.

A long-handled corn popper is a fine toaster or broiler. Use in the furnace and broil chops or steak or make a piece of toast.

Gilt frames may be cleaned with oil of turpentine. Rub on with a cloth after dusting well.

Celery salt may be prepared at home. Grind through the finest knife in the meat grinder two ounces of celery seed, add ten times the bulk of salt, stir and mix well and put into a bottle.

A dark blue cover made of denim or gingham is good to slip over the ironing board to save it when pressing suits or dark clothing.

A child's small sadiron is most useful in ironing baby's dresses.

Very pretty and dainty baby shoes may be made from old glove tops. Take the long white kid gloves, have the wrists perfectly clean and press out carefully with a warm iron to remove all wrinkles. Cut the soles and sides in one piece, making the soles wide enough in front to come up over the toes. Put a seam in the back and gather the fullness where the sides do not meet. Line with soft silk; eyelets may be put in or they may be worked by hand. Trim with a shirring or bind the tops, face with ribbon and the shoes are ready.

Cooked dried apricots, cottage cheese and mayonnaise makes a most delicious salad.

Keep lemons for several weeks by putting them in a fruit jar and sealing them tightly.

When warming over roast meat place in the oven with slices of bacon over the top. Bake until the bacon is crisp.

For eclairs shape the paste four and one-half inches long and one inch wide. Bake, split at the side and fill with coffee, vanilla chocolate or whipped cream filling.

For Bavarian puffs brush the puffs just before taking from the oven with beaten egg and sprinkle with chopped nuts.

SHERMAN GETS CLOCK

The old grandfather clock, originally owned by Kate O. Wolf and which has been under the custody of the sheriff since a fight for its possession started in the local court nearly two years ago, now becomes the property of George W. Sherman, of Westminster, formerly of New Oxford. This change of ownership comes as the result of a decision handed down by the Superior Court of Pennsylvania while sitting in Pittsburgh Tuesday reversing the decision of the Adams county court. The decision, further directs that judgement be entered here in favor of the plaintiff, Mr. Sherman, carrying with it the costs of the case. Under an agreement of record the clock will be delivered to Mr. Sherman. Incidentally the decision of the Superior Court in this case known as George W. Sherman versus C. A. Stoner marks the first time that Judge Donald P. McPherson has been reversed since he became president judge of the Adams-Fulton judicial district six years ago. Costs in the case amounted to $400 while the clock itself is worth only about $200.

C. A. Stoner, who bought the clock at public sale, endeavored to hold his possession. Sherman represented that the clock had been given to him by Kate Wolf before she was taken to Harrisburg.

SHOOTS AND HANGS SELF

To make doubly sure of taking his own life, Earl Munshour, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Munshour, of Freedom township, shot himself in the heart with a shot gun and hanged himself an instant later Tuesday afternoon in the loft of the barn, on the farm of his father. Dr. Crist, Adams county coroner, decided no inquest was necessary. Members of the family are unable to give any cause for the act. He left no note and did not intimate he contemplated the act. The body was discovered by the boy's mother while searching for him. Terrified she ran screaming to Roadhaupt's mill for assistance. The boy, no doubt, in a fit of melancholia, took the gun and after carefully preparing the rope fired the shot which was sufficient to kill him. While there is only scanty evidence, there are indications that the youth took poison before shooting himself. Young Munshour was apparently in good health, altho unusually quiet, when he ate dinner with the family. Besides his parents he is survived by a sister, 2 step-brothers, and a step-sister.

OUT WALL OF ROCK
The Bethlehem Mines Corporation set off a blast of 30 holes which threw out from 50,000 to 75,000 tons of stone at their quarries, near Bittingers, on Thursday afternoon. Three hundred and fifty cases of 50 pounds each of 40 per cent dynamite, the product of the "Trojan" Powder Company, was used. A representative of that company did the wiring and set off the blast. The holes were about 6 inches in diameter and 60 feet deep, the drilling of which required many week's work.

There were many people on hand to witness the culmination of the work and see the effect wrought by the giant explosion. It looked as if some superhuman had made a great effort and pushed out the solid breast of rock, 10 feet thick, 50 feet high, and 200 feet long, which toppled over with a mighty crash and was followed by a cloud of smoke and dust which slowly floated away.

It is estimated by Foreman Earl Bechtel that the loosened stone will keep the force of men busy for the next five weeks, working ten hours a day. Some of the chunks thrown out are so large they will require blasting to remove. The lime stone is raised up an incline to a big crusher, shaped like an old-fashioned coffee mill, on a large scale, where it is broken to a certain grade and then loaded on cars for shipment to the Bethlehem Steel Company's furnaces at Steelton or Sparrows Point. Here it is used as a flux in the process of manufacturing Bessemer steel.

Charles Weinberg, and Gus Makaris, Hanover, took movie pictures of the blast, which will be added to films already taken of scenes at the quarry while the workmen were drilling the holes and loading them.

GRIEVED TO DEATH

Grief over the death of her son in France shortened the life of Mrs. John H. Miller who succumbed after a long illness at her home in Bonneauville Thursday evening at 6:30 o'clock. While serving with the American Expeditionary Forces, France, Guy Miller, a member of the 316th Infantry, died. Since receiving the news of her son's death, Mrs. Miller was in ill health until she too passed away. Cancer of the liver was given as the cause of death. Mrs. Miller, who was 66 years and 9 months old, spent her life in the Bonneauville section of the county. She moved into the village seven years ago. She was a member of the Rosary society. Her husband; two daughters, Mrs. Augustus Hawn, near Bonneauville, Mrs. George Gebhart, Bonneauville; a brother, Lewis Miller, Irish town; and a sister, Mrs. John Feiser, Philadelphia, survive her. Funeral services were held Monday morning in St. Joseph's Catholic church, Bonneauville by Rev. Fr. J. M. Nidhols. Interment was made in St. Joseph's cemetery.

VERY MUCH ALIVE

W. A. Feiser, Hanover, formerly of town, is very much alive, altho a York newspaper Friday morning carried the startling headlines, "W. A. Feiser Dead—Former Hanover Resident Dies in the State Hospital at Harrisburg—Worked for W. M. R.R." The mistake was evidently made by the head-writer who, taking a Hanover item which told of the death of a former resident and which said that the undertaker had gone to Harrisburg to bring back the body, neglected to read further than the first line of copy—umped to the conclusion that Mr. Feiser himself had died. So if you see "Bill" don't think you are seeing a ghost. The opportunity is not given to many persons to read of their own "death."

FASCINATING "FANNY BROWN."

A number of the young men and young ladies of the immaculate Conception parish will present the play, "The Fascinating Fanny Brown", on Friday and Saturday evenings of April 22nd and 23rd. The following is the story of the play: Percival and Billy are wooing Dorothy Dudley and Florence Howe. To make Dorothy jealous, Billy writes love letters to a pretended "Fanny Brown." Dorothy accepts Billy, but discovers his plot and plans to punish him. When her brother Henry arrives unexpectedly, she dresses him as a girl, and introduces him as "Fanny Brown." Billy and Percival are worried. A nervous guest, Mrs. Moffet, thinks Henry is a traveling hypnotist who has annoyed her. Billy and Audrey discover who Henry really is, and tie him up, insisting he is the hypnotist. After a funny scene of a dog fight under pretended hypnotic influence, Henry is released, and the girls forgive their lovers.

"Hanging out the Wash", a "black-face" sketch that has delighted many audiences, will also be presented. Come and see Onyx and Emma hanging out the wash and hear them tell about their friends and neighbors. Don't miss it—the admission is only 35c for adults and 25c for children.

BREAD PRICES DROP

Altho the price of wheat has been down for some time and the price of flour has dropped accordingly, it was not until Friday that this drop was reflected at all in the price of bread here and then not to any extent. One firm, the Hanover Steam Bakery, announced to its patrons Friday morning that one cent would be cut from the price of its loaves of bread but the price of the thesmall loaf, 9 cents, will remain the same. G. F. Eckenrode, the McSherrystown baker, cut the price of his bread Saturday. The large loaves which sold at 13 cents were cut to 12 cents and the 9-cent loaves now sell at 8 cents.

The Hershey Baking Company, of Hanover, cut the price of its bread Saturday morning. The large loaves which sold at 13 cents now sell at 12 cents and the small loaves which sold for 9 cents were cut to 8 cents.

The lowest prices in Hanover are charged by the Merry Widow bakery, who price their small loaves at 7 cents and the large loaves at 11 cents.

Pies, cakes and pretzels have also been slightly cut.

NEW CAFE DICKS

ON THE CONEWAGO
C. Tilden Myers, of near town, has leased a plot of ground near the iron bridge at Dicks, along the Big Conewago, on which he will begin the erection in the near future, of a 23x56 ft. pavilion. The opening will be held on May 28th. The business will be conducted under the name, Cafe Dicks, in honor of Judge W. Howard Dicks, who has done so much to make the resort at that place the most famous camping ground in this section of the state. Mr. Myers has had considerable experience in the restaurant business, and, with the great increase in the number of campers coming to Dicks every year, he sees the need of a up-to-date cafe at that place. Lunches, ice cream, soft drinks and various delicacies will be handled. An orchestra will furnish music for dancing on Saturday nights and on holidays, while a Victrola will be installed for the use of weekday dancers. No Sunday dancing will be permitted. The main room on Sunday will be used as a dining room, with regular dinners served at a reasonable cost. Prospective buyers of lots at Adams county's greatest summer resort should interview Henry Haar, V. K. Jordan, C. E. Miller and other owners.

BASEBALL MEETING

A rousing baseball meeting of players and fans will be held in the American Legion rooms, Hanover street, on Monday evening at 8 o'clock. The ITEM's plea for a town team has met with favorable response, and "Jack" Miller has issued a call for everybody to come to Monday evening's meeting to devise ways and means of giving New Oxford one of the best teams in local history. If you have a spark of sportsmanship in you, be there. Get the other fellow by the back of the neck and drag him in, too—the more the merrier. By all means, help boost baseball in New Oxford by your presence Monday evening.

OPERATION DISCLOSED

SPLINTER IN FOOT
Falling from an apple tree, last June, Pauline, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Crook, of Dicks, ran a splinter into her left foot. The mother of the child extracted what she thought was the entire splinter and applied home remedies. However, the sore failed to heal, and the girl was taken to the Annie M. Warner hospital, Gettysburg, one day last week, where an operation disclosed about an inch of wood embedded in the foot. The splinter was removed by the surgeon and the child is getting along nicely.

OPENS GETTYSBURG OFFICE

The room now occupied by the barber shop of Guy Mickley, in Gettysburg, has been rented by Dr. George H. Seaks, New Oxford physician, who will take possession April 25th, after Mr. Mickley and his staff have moved across the street. Dr. Seaks will continue to live in New Oxford and keep up his practice here. He will be in Gettysburg every afternoon from 2 to 5:30 o'clock, excepting Friday and Sunday, to conduct his work as an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist.

NEW MACHINE SHOP

C. P. Smith, of Baltimore, formerly of New Oxford, has purchased from Mrs. E. A. Bollinger, of Harrisburg, her property on Lincoln Way, West, for $1600. Possession May 1st. Mr. Smith will build a new house on the site in the near future. He will operate a machine shop in the barn on the rear of the lot, making a specialty of automobile parts. Mr. Smith has sold his property in Baltimore and will move his family here the first week in May. He spent Friday in town on business.

WOMEN WHO CANNOT WORK

Read Mrs. Corley's Letter and Benefit by Her Experience

Edmund, S. C.—"I was run down with nervousness and female trouble and suffered every month. I was not able to do any work and tried a lot of medicine, but got no relief. I saw your medicine advertised in a little book that was thrown in my door, and I had not taken two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before I could see it was helping me. I am keeping house now and am able to do all of my work. I cannot say enough for your medicine. It has done more for me than any doctor. I have not paper enough to tell you how much it has done for me and for my friends. You may print this letter if you wish."—ELIZABETH C. CORLEY, care of A. P. Corley, Edmund, S. C.

Ability to stand the strain of work is the privilege of the strong and healthy, but how our hearts ache for the weak and sickly women struggling with their daily rounds of household duties, with backaches, headaches, nervousness and almost every movement brings a new pain. Why will not the mass of letters from women all over this country, which we have been publishing, convince such women that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help them just as surely as it did Mrs. Corley?

HOW DOCTORS TREAT COLDS AND THE FLU

First Step in Treatment Is a Brisk Purgative With Calotabs, the Purified and Refined Calomel Tablets that are Nausealess, Safe and Sure.

Doctors have found by experience that no medicine for colds and influenza can be depended upon for full effectiveness until the liver is made thoroughly active. That is why the first step in the treatment is the now, nausealess calomel tablets called Calotabs, which are free from the sickening and weakening effects of the old style calomel. Doctors also point out the fact that an active liver may go a long way towards preventing influenza and is one of the most important factors in enabling the patient to successfully withstand an attack and ward off pneumonia.

One Calotab on the tongue at bed time with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea nor the slightest interference with your eating, pleasure or work. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified, and you are feeling fine, with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Druggists sell Calotabs only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Your money will be cheerfully refunded if you do not find them delightful.—(Adv.)

KEEP SILVER IN BEST CONDITION

If Cleaned Regularly Little Time or Effort to Keep It Bright and Lustrous.

SULPHIDE CAUSES TARNISH

Glittering Surface May Be Obtained by Use of Friction Cleaners, by Electrolysis or by Boiling in Strong Solution.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"All the table service was of silver and gold." Winifred was reading aloud from the society columns an account of a dinner, and as she read the last item her voice was full of awe. "Think of it, Nan; plates and everything, solid silver."

"I am thinking of it," said Nan, the practical one; "and I'm thinking also that I'm glad I haven't on my hands the cleaning of all those solid silver plates and everything." The flat silver that was given Jack and me when we were married is more than a plenty for me when cleaning day comes around. I like housework, but I do detest cleaning silver."

Many women feel as Nan did; but if silver is cleaned regularly, little time or effort is required to keep it bright and lustrous. The office of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture gives the following directions on the care of silver:

Causes of Tarnish.

The tarnish on silver is silver sulphide, and is due to the sulphur compounds in the air where coal and gas are burned, and also in many foods, in wool, in rubber, and in some bleached and dyed materials.

This is the reason silversmiths rarely, if ever, use white cotton flannel for their cases of silver. Dryness prevents tarnish somewhat; so camphor, which absorbs moisture, is sometimes put into the silver drawer. Silver may be cleaned by the use of certain powders, pastes, and cloths, which clean by friction, by boiling it in a strong alkaline solution, or by a process known as electrolysis.

The materials which clean by friction are whiting, jewelers' rouge, and commercial pastes or powders. The noncommercial powders are mixed to a paste with water, ammonia, or alcohol, rubbed on the silver, allowed to dry, and then polished off with a soft cloth, chamols, or a brush. The result is bright, lustrous silver. Prepared cloths, sold under various trade names, also clean by friction. They are usually cotton flannel treated with a cleaning mixture, and are convenient but sometimes relatively expensive.

The alkaline solution for cleaning silver is made by dissolving four teaspoons borax, three teaspoons washing soda, or two teaspoons lye (caustic soda) in one quart water. The silver is placed in an old kettle or pan, covered with this solution, boiled for 10 minutes, and cooled in the water.

The Electrolytic Method.

One method of removing the tarnish from silver by electrolysis is the following:

Fill an enameled or agateware kettle partly full of water in which has been dissolved one teaspoon of either washing soda or baking soda and one teaspoon salt to each quart of water. Heat this solution to the boiling point, put in strips of aluminum or bright zinc, add the tarnished silver, and boil it. The silver must be covered completely by the water, and each piece must be in contact with the aluminum or the zinc, either directly or through other silver. When the tarnish has disappeared the silver should be removed from the kettle, washed, and dried with a clean, soft cloth. An aluminum kettle may be used, but it soon corrodes and must be cleaned, as only a clean, bright kettle serves the purpose. The zinc also grows dull and then is less active. It may be cleaned, however, in water containing a little hydrochloric (muriatic) acid, which is very poisonous and must be handled with extreme care.

Silver cleaned either in an alkaline solution or by electrolysis lacks luster, which cleaning by friction gives. It may be made bright, however, by a little rubbing with a soft cloth or chamols.

INCLUDE VEGETABLES IN THE WINTER DIET

Necessary During Cold Weather as Well as Summer.

Tired-Out Feeling Which Many People Have at End of Winter Comes From Lack of Supply of Garden Truck and Fruits.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Vegetables should be freely included in the winter diet as well as in the summer one. Doctors say that that tired-out feeling which many people have at the end of winter—"spring fever"—often comes from a lack of fruits and vegetables in the winter diet. Plenty of vegetables keep the children well and make their meals more appetizing. Vegetables mashed and put through a sieve are more easily digested by little children.

Salts of many kinds are needed by the body, or it will not work smoothly. Vegetables and fruit are rich in them and if you eat a variety you are sure to get all the kinds of salt you need.

When the water in which vegetables are cooked is thrown away, valuable salts are often wasted. Sometimes the flavor is not desirable, but if it is good save this water for soup or gravy. An even better process is to cook the vegetables in as little water as possible so there is none left to drain off, or bake or steam it. Canned and dried vegetables often need only skillful seasoning to make them taste as good as the fresh variety.

Canned corn is very good when turned into a baking dish with the addition of milk and seasoning added, heated through in the oven, and allowed to brown on top. Outside stalks of celery, a green pepper, or both, chopped and added before baking, will vary the flavor of the dish.

Spinach Loaf.

A small can of spinach, chard, or beet tops, combined with rice or bread crumbs, will serve seven or eight people if it is made into a loaf. Asparagus or string beans are also good served in this way:

2 cupsful cooked lima beans,
1 can chopped spinach,
4 cupsful boiled rice,
2 cupsful white sauce,
1 red pepper.

Make a thick white sauce of two cupsful of milk, four tablespoonfuls of flour, four tablespoonfuls of butter, and one teaspoonful of salt. Melt salt and mix with flour, add to milk and stir over the fire until it thickens. Mix with the rice, chopped spinach and pepper. Form into a loaf and bake 20 or 30 minutes.

Investigations with dried vegetables, which have been conducted in the experimental kitchen of the United States Department of Agriculture, show that provided the dried vegetables are of good quality they are quite as satisfactory when they are cooked without previous soaking, as when soaked, and oftentimes better.

MAKE SAVORY FRUIT PASTES

Combination of Different Kinds of Fruits Is Excellent—Canned Goods Can Be Used.

Fruit pastes are made from the edible portion of fruit which after cooking has been passed through a sieve and cooked again until the excess water is driven off. Only a small amount of sugar is required. A combination of different kinds of fruit pulp makes a delightfully flavored paste, but peaches alone make a delicious one. Canned fruit can also be used to make paste. When the pulp is boiled down until very thick, pour it in ½-inch layers on marble or glass slabs or on a platter. Place where there is a strong circulation of air and allow the paste to dry for two or three days. When it is sufficiently dry, cut it into 1-inch squares. Roll in granulated sugar and place again in a draft. Paste may be packed in tin boxes, glass jars, or paraffin-coated containers.

PASTRY SHELLS

Bake pastry in or on the outside of muffin pans and fill these shells with jam, preserves, or well-sweetened stewed fruit. With or without the addition of whipped cream these form a delicious dessert.

These shells may be filled with creamed chicken, creamed peas, or other creamed vegetables, adding an attractive dish for another meal.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Mildewed leather may be cleaned with vaseline.

Long handles on brooms, brushes and dustpans save the back.

Dinner plates should always be sent to the table warm enough not to cool the food served on them.

To remove grease spots from silk, take a lump of magnesia, rub it wet on spot, let dry, then brush the powder off.

Keep empty spools and slip them over the nails in the hookless closet. They are a great protection to the clothes.

RUSTIC BIRD HOUSES.

The bird cabin in Fig. 1 has a box foundation. The box will make a strong structure and water-tight walls, whereas a great deal of chinking and rechinking of the spaces between the logs would be necessary if the box were not used.

A starch box may be used for the cabin's base. Cut the gable ends to fit upon the box ends, and the two sides of the roof to fit the gable ends, and fasten all together. If the cabin is intended for wrens, cut a seven-eighths-inch doorway; if for bluebirds, cut a one and one-half-inch doorway.

Gather slender, straight sticks for logs. Cut these into side and end logs of the right length, so when laid up against the box walls their ends will

A HOME-MADE INDOOR TENNIS OUTFIT.

After the supper dishes have been cleared away, what better fun than a game of tennis upon the dining-table.

Probably the only thing that you will have to buy is a pair of 4 or 5-inch iron clamps such as are used for curtain-stretcher ends (Fig. 3).

The clamps support the ends of the tennis-net (Figs. 1 and 4), for which purpose you can find nothing better.

For the net get a piece of muslin 7 inches wide by a few inches shorter than the table is wide, or, if you want a transparent net, take a piece of curtain net or mosquito-netting. Turn over ½ inch of both top and bottom edges, and sew, to give them body. Figure 4 shows how the net is supported.

ported. Slip the clamps over the table edges, after lapping pieces of cloth over the surface as shown in Fig. 4 to prevent the iron from scratching the finish. Place the clamps directly opposite one another, and turn the lap and project about an inch. Fig. 3 shows how to notch the sides of each log at the points of crossing, so the ends will interlock. At the doorway fill in a thin piece of wood bent to extend around the opening for jambs to butt the short logs against, and tack through this frame into the short-log ends.

Cover the roof with pieces of bark and fasten a branch along the peak for a ridgepole. The bird cabin should have a rustic post support, as is suggested in Fig. 1.

A log about two feet in length is required for the house in Fig. 4. A cavity must be hollowed out in this of the form of a woodpecker's hole. Figs. 5 and 6 show how to do this by sawing the log in half lengthwise, then gouging one-half of the hole out of each half. After cutting the hole and the entrance opening, nail the halves together, saw off the top on a slant and nail a short board to it for a roof. This house may be strapped to a tree trunk.

The rustic ark in Fig. 7 is built upon a foundation made as shown in Fig. 8. Round the tops of the uprights and fasten these pieces to the baseboard an inch from the ends. The roof is made of bark. If possible, strip this from a log in one piece. If you cannot do this, roof over the framework with thin wood from berry boxes, then fasten pieces of bark upon it. The ends and the bottom should also be covered with bark. Bore the entrance hole through one end. Screw a pair of screweyes into the uprights to fasten wire hangers to.

The bird temple in Fig. 9 has a baseboard and a roofboard each about eight inches square (Fig. 10). Connect these with four corner posts set into holes bored in both pieces. Set the base holes an inch in from the corners and the roof holes two inches in from the corners. With the posts driven into their holes, cut short pieces of branches, notch their ends and pile them up log-cabin fashion to inclose the walls. You will notice that the logs of each tier are shorter than those of the tier beneath.

Thumbscrews up, as shown. Then prepare a pair of stick posts 6 inches long (A, Fig. 3), screw a pair of small screweyes into each, one near each end, and with cord bind the posts to the clamp as shown in Fig. 4. Sew short pieces of cord to the ends of the net, and tie these to the screweyes in post A.

To make a long enough court, it is best to extend the dining-table, and put in several extra table leaves. If it is a circular table, this will give you a court of about the proportions shown in Figs. 1 and 2. Use cloth tape or cotton-twine for marking off the inner left and right-hand courts. Twelve inches or so each side of the net, pass a piece of tape or twine entirely around the table, as shown at B (Fig. 5), then connect these pieces at their centers with piece C. If the joints between the table boards come as they do in Fig. 5, you can pass the ends of strip C through the joints, pull them tight, and tie underneath the table. Strips B and C will make the four courts marked L (left) and R (right) in Fig. 2.

Tennis rackets can be made in several ways. Figure 6 shows about the simplest possible scheme, a square board centered on and nailed to a stick handle. The racket in Fig. 7 is made of a hard-pail cover and a stick.

The rules for table tennis are almost identical with those for outdoor tennis. If you are not acquainted with these, it will be easy to find a tennis enthusiast who will coach you. The player who serves first must serve the ball into her opponent's right court (R, Fig. 2), first, then into the left court (L), and when it becomes the opponent's serve, she must serve into her opponent's right court, then into her left. The ball must be considered in play as long as it can be kept bouncing upon the table, except when it bounces twice before being returned.

Fuel From Wheat Straw.

A ton of sun-dried wheat straw has been found from the Canadian experiments to have a fuel value about equal to that of 32 gallons of gasoline. It yields about 10,000 cubic feet of purified gas, 600 to 650 pounds of carbon residue, and about 10 gallons of tarry liquid. The gas, which has a caloric value of about 400 British thermal units per cubic foot, burns with a blue flame, and has a slight odor. Its combustible constituents are carbon monoxide, methane and hydrogen. The carbon residue is capable of being reduced to a very fine powder.

RESULTS REMARKABLE SAYS NEW YORK MAN

Prominent Rochester Citizen Tried Ten Years To Get Relief, But Tanlac Is Only Thing That Helped Him.

One of the latest to testify regarding the powers of Tanlac, the celebrated medicine which has been accomplishing such remarkable results, is James J. Beasley, 102 Elmdorf Avenue, Rochester, New York. Mr. Beasley has been chief record keeper for the Department of Water Works, city of Rochester, for thirty years and is a well known and highly respected citizen. In referring to the remarkable recovery of his health by the use of Tanlac, Mr. Beasley said: "I have been trying for ten years to find relief from a case of dyspepsia. Nothing ever helped me to amount to anything until I got Tanlac. This is saying a great deal, for I did everything it seems that a man could do to find relief. Of course, I was hardly ever sick enough to go to bed and was most always able to keep going, but I just never felt right. At times during those ten years, my stomach would become sour like vinegar. I would have an uncomfortable bloated up feeling after eating that would last for hours. I suffered a great deal from nausea. At times my heart would flutter and palpitate and I would become alarmed over my condition. My nerves were on edge all the time, and I became irritable, nervous and restless. I had no strength or energy to do anything. In fact I wasn't like myself at all. Even a week or two ago it was an effort for me to get out of my chair and I felt as stiff and clumsy as an

"It is really remarkable what Tanlac has accomplished in my case. It has relieved me entirely of indigestion. I never have that distressing feeling any more after eating, and I feel perfectly fine in every way. I will always feel grateful for what this wonderful medicine has done for me and I am only too glad to give it my heartiest endorsement."

POOR INCUBATOR BAD INVESTMENT

Advisable to Buy Machine Used With Best Success in Immediate Neighborhood.

DETERMINE SIZE BY NEEDS

Special Cellar or Incubator House Should Be Provided If Equipment Is Extensive—Important to Keep Air Fresh.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

After the poultryman has made up his mind to buy an incubator, he is confronted with the question of makes and sizes. As a general rule, a cheap machine is a poor investment, requiring more attention than a good one and wearing out quicker besides being less dependable. The value of the machine is small compared with that of the eggs used during the normal life of an incubator. It is poor economy, therefore, to buy a machine which is not reliable. Whenever possible it is well to select the kind of incubator that has given satisfaction in your neighborhood, so that you may get the benefit of the experience of other operators near by.

Varies With Needs.
The best size of incubator to buy varies with numerous circumstances, say poultry specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. About as much time is required to care for a 60 as for a 360-egg machine; it is usually advisable to get one of at least 150-egg capacity. Special conditions, though, often exist which make smaller machines valuable.

A small machine is often used in connection with a larger one, all eggs being placed in the large machine after the first or second test. Many poultrymen believe that it pays to have an incubator large enough to hatch the bulk of their stock in two or three hatches, so that much time is saved in tending to the incubators and brooders. In addition the chickens are more uniform in size than those hatched when the incubating period extends over a longer time.

A fair estimate for a poultry farm is an incubator of one-egg capacity per hen, provided that about one-half of the flock is to be renewed yearly and no outside hatching is carried on. The larger machines cost less in proportion to their capacity than the smaller ones.

Good Results in Cellars.
Incubators are operated in a great variety of places with success. Where only a few small machines are used they are usually located in a room or the cellar of the house. A special cellar or incubator house should be provided if the incubator equipment is extensive or if mammoth machines are used. It is important to have a well-ventilated room not subject to wide variations in temperature. If built above ground the walls should be double and the entire building well insulated.

Good results in hatching are secured in incubator cellars and in incubator rooms entirely above ground level, but the cellar is more commonly used. Incubators may be operated in buildings with single walls, especially in regions which have a mild climate, but a well-insulated room is preferable.

The incubator room or cellar should be large enough to allow the attendant to work around the machines conveniently. Many incubator cellars are provided with some system of ventilation in addition to the windows. This is not always necessary, however. The chief point is to keep the air in the room fresh. Muslin screens on the windows provide good ventilation without draft and at the same time keep the sun from shining on the machines. Many incubator cellars have cement floors, which are easier than dirt floors to keep clean and neat.

BIRDS AID GREATLY IN WAR ON INSECTS

Of 27 Species Examined 25 Were Grasshopper Eaters.

Farmer Should Form Defensive Alliance With Aerial Cavalry to Obtain Necessary Protection Against Enemies.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Special investigations to find how far the various bird species aid mankind in his perpetual war on insect enemies are being carried on by the bureau of biological survey, United States Department of Agriculture. In the western states the grasshopper is particularly troublesome, so far as the farmer and the ranch owner are concerned. Specialists found that of 27 species of birds examined 25 were grasshopper eaters. In 19 of the species all of the individuals collected had given grasshoppers place on their menu. The birds having the best records were the lark sparrows, meadowlarks, Franklin gulls, Arkansas kingbird, crow blackbird, and the common kingbird.

Probably there are not birds enough in the country to clean up a full-strength invasion of grasshoppers such as the western farmers have come to dread, it is said, but the birds assist materially in the efforts made by man to control the pest.

Specialists say that poisoning campaigns are among the best weapons used against the grasshopper. From time to time reports are sent in, saying that many birds have fallen victim to the poisoned mixtures placed for the insects. Such charges were associated with the gypsy-moth spraying campaign in New England and with the laying of poisoned mashes for cut worms and other insects. Careful observation, made by experts, shows that the bird losses from such causes are insignificant. Some birds, it is said, are not harmed at all by the presence of poison placed for insects or vermin; the quail in California were not harmed by the baits that were set out to kill ground squirrels—though the campaign was a general one and was conducted with much intensity. In the Dakotas a few birds succumbed to the arsenic mashes placed for grasshoppers, but the number killed was so slight as to be of no consequence, it is said.

By killing stray cats and chasing off unscrupulous hunters the farmer can become a party to a sort of defensive alliance with his birds, so that when his crops need protection against insect enemies he will have a squadron of aerial cavalry to help him repulse the raid, specialists say.

SEED-TESTING PLEASES BOY

Work Is Admirably Adapted for School Room—Equipment Necessary Is Inexpensive.

In order to prevent Jack from becoming a dull boy as a result of all work and no play, many hours can be spent profitably in the schoolroom by forgetting books and lessons for a time and testing seeds. Seed testing is a diversion that is as practical as it is enjoyable. It is admirably adapted for exercise work in every schoolroom whether or not a systematic course in agriculture is given. Little equipment is necessary. A study of samples of farm seed to be sown by the pupils' parents, to determine the percentage of germination and the extent of impurities in the seed, offers a means of connecting the school with the home with benefits to both. Impurity tests can be made by an examination with a magnifying glass. The only apparatus necessary for germination tests of small seed consists of two plates, and a piece of blotting paper. Write to the United States Department of Agriculture for Farmers' Bulletin 428, "Testing Farm Seeds in the Home and in the Rural School." It gives complete directions.

SALT IMPROVES COWPEA HAY

Enhances Palatability and Where Crop Is Not Entirely Cured Prevents Fermentation.

The use of salt has been recommended by many successful growers in the mowing of cowpea hay. Although not essential, undoubtedly the hay is improved in palatability, and it may, in the case of hay not entirely cured, assist in preventing fermentation. About eight quarts of salt are used to one ton of hay.

And Others Besides This Precocious Youth Have Had Much the Same Feeling.

It is, perhaps, unnecessary to give the name of the New England city which is the residence of the lad who figures in this story.

There had been a visitor, and to this lad she said: "And so this is little Walter? My, my! What a big boy you've grown to be! I wouldn't have believed it possible."

"Mother," said Walter, when the visitor had gone, "doesn't it pass your comprehension how persons in whom one would naturally expect an ordinary degree of intelligence appear to believe, all history and nature to the contrary, that the children of their acquaintance will always remain infants and persist in expressing surprise when they observe the perfectly natural increase in one's stature?"—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply rub a ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Rich Yukon Silver Deposits

Authoritative reports from the Yukon territory, Canada, indicate the location of marvelously rich silver deposits in the Mayo district, about 150 miles east of Dawson, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. A few veins, eight feet in thickness, assaying 5,000 to 14,000 ounces of the metal to the ton, are being worked. Five-foot veins are common, and smaller lodes with an assay of 200 ounces, are said to be plentiful. At present transportation and living conditions in the district are very bad. These will be bettered if a proposed motor road into the territory is built.

Introspection.

"If a man would consult his mirror as much as a woman does he might learn a great deal about himself," remarked the near philosopher.

"I doubt it," said the observant citizen. "The average matinee idol is not half as good at self-analysis as some homely, bald-headed fellow who never sees himself in a mirror except when he shaves."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Feel All Worn Out?

Has a cold, grip, or other infectious disease sapped your strength? Do you suffer backache, lack ambition, feel dull and depressed? Look to your kidneys! Physicians agree that kidney trouble often results from infectious disease. Too often the kidneys are neglected because the sufferer doesn't realize they have broken down under the strain of filtering disease-created poisons from the blood. If your back is bad, your kidneys act irregularly, and you feel all run down, use Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's helped thousands. Ask your neighbor.

A Maryland Case

D. W. Shaw, barber, Clark Ave., Pocomoke City, Md., says: "At times a catch would take me in my back and when moved sharp pains would shoot through me, nearly drawing me double. At other times a weary, restless ache continued for days without relief. I read of Doan's Kidney Pills and got a box. They soon gave me relief. I never had needed a kidney remedy since."

have been present. There will be a musical program every evening.

Harold, 2-year-old son of Mr. and
Mrs. Floyd Detter, of near Wellsville,
was seriously injured at noon Friday,
when a runaway team of horses
hitched to a steel roller, dashed thru
a field and across the farm yard,
where the child was playing. The roller passed over the child, injuring
him internally, and inflicting bruises
and abrasions of the head and shoulder. The horses dashed on and were stopped when they came in contact with a dwelling. The tongue of the roller plunged through a window of the house, tearing the entire frame
out. The horses are young and fractions and became frightened at the
noise of the roller, tearing the lines
from Mr. Detter's hands.

GAVE 11 BOGUS CHECKS

As the result of forming the exceedingly bad habit of passing bogus checks, Ivan C. Sentz, aged about 30, of Bonneauville, was lodged in the Adams county jail Thursday evening by Sheriff Hartman. John O. Adams, Littlestown restaurant keeper, is the latest man to complain against Sentz. He told Charles H. Mayers, Littlestown justice of the peace, Thursday afternoon that Sentz had given him a worthless check. "Squire Mayers summoned Sheriff Hartman who conveyed Sentz to jail. According to the authorities Sentz has passed no less than eleven bad checks in the past several months without seeming to realize that in each instance he was committing a serious offense.

The Bonneauville man has been in financial straits for some time, according to men acquainted with his case. He failed in a venture as a tractor salesman and then started the practice of writing checks for many times more than the amount of money he had. About two months ago Sentz was taken to Gettysburg on the charge of passing a bogus check for $33 on the Farmers & Merchants bank of New Oxford. He appeared before "Squire Hill on that charge and for operating a motor vehicle without a license and was released on $500 bail. That bail incidentally was furnished by E. A. Melhorn, Bonneauville garage owner, who, it was later revealed, had previously fallen a victim to Sentz's habit. Even after Mr. Melhorn was forced to make good a sum in the First National bank, Gettysburg, on Sentz's account, he provided the $500 bail.

Sentz, according to the authorities, then commenced the practice of putting small sums in various banks and giving out checks for sums three and four times in excess of the amounts he deposited. The result was that he became to be generally known as a bogus check passer. One of the tricks, it is said, was to hire a man to move his belongings from one place to another and then give him a bad check for his work. Why the Bonneauville man persisted in the practice is a mystery to the local authorities who consider him a man presenting rather a bright appearance. Just how many men will appear before him to press charges has not been determined.

Catarrh being greatly influenced by constitutional conditions requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine is taken internally and acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the System thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. SKIDS OVER EMBANKMENT

Skidding on the wet surface of the Lincoln highway, about a mile east of Abbottstown, on Friday afternoon about 3 o'clock, the Buick coupe driven by J. E. Phillips, York, went over a 15 foot embankment near a bridge and turned over on its side. Mr. Phillips and daughter, who accompanied him, were thrown out into the meadow but escaped injury. The car was slightly damaged and hung along side of the bank until late in the day when it was taken to York. The highway was wet and slippery from a thunder storm which swept over the eastern part of the county about that time.

MAN'S FACE SHATTERED

Nelson Stauffer, 59 years old, of Baresville, near Hanover, narrowly escaped death Monday afternoon when he was kicked by a mule, the force of the blow caving in the right side of his face. The upper jaw bone was smashed into tiny bits, the right cheek cut to the bone and laid open from the mouth to the eye, the nose was broken, and the lining of the mouth torn. The unfortunate man was wearing a set of false teeth, and the plate was driven into his throat and broken. It is believed that the traces twisted and linked, and that he stepped between the animals to adjust the traces, when one of the mules struck out with his hind feet. The patient was taken to the West Side sanatorium, York.

Ruth, 17-year-old daughter of Henry Smyser, was found dead Sunday afternoon, sitting upright in a chair at her home at Rudy's mill, East Manchester township, apparently looking out the window. Miss Smyser was in her usual health and had not been heard to complain.

Losing his balance when seated on a window ledge on the second floor of a dormitory at Gettysburg college, Richard Smith, aged 19 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Smith, York, plunged head first to a brick pavement Friday night, sustaining a badly sprained left wrist, a deep gash on the chin and other injuries. His escape from more serious injury is regarded as miraculous. He left for Philadelphia to have an X-ray taken of his jaw.

Three men in a truck early Friday morning robbed the Woolworth 5c and 10c store, Columbia, carrying away the heavy iron safe. The store stands on the principal street in the town.

LAXATIVE for Aged People

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

HOSPITAL GRANTED $5,000

An appropriation of $5,000 for the next two years has been granted the Ankle M. Warner Hospital by the House Appropriations Committee, says a Harrisburg report. While this action does not complete the transaction it is believed the amount will be approved by the Governor. The bill presented by Dr. Eugene Elgin, Representative from this district, for an appropriation of $12,000 was introduced in the Legislature after the State Board of Charities had failed in securing a grant for the local hospital. Other institutions in this section and the grants they received are: Paradise Rectory, York county, $9,000; York Hospital, $30,000; York Society to Protect Children and Aged Persons $12,000.

Preventative Medicine.—The tendency of medical science is toward preventative measures. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. Pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, often follows a cold or attack of the grip. The cold prepares the system for the reception and development of the pneumonia germ. The longer the cold hangs on, the the greater the danger. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the first indications of a cold appears so as to get rid of it with the least possible delay. It is folly to risk an attack of pneumonia when this remedy may be obtained for a trifle.

BOY SUFFOCATES IN WHEAT

At the West Fayetteville elevator, Charles, 12-year-old son of Charles Branthaver, one of the firm operating the elevator, was suffocated in a bin of wheat and died as his body was released. The lad had been helping shovel wheat in the third floor of the elevator, and, going to a large storage bin holding 600 bushels of wheat, began playing in it. The wheat started to shift and engulfed the boy, who tried to climb out, but sank deeper as in a quicksand. He called for help and his father and others ran to him as he sank. His father caught his hand stretched above the grain and held on while men frantically shoveled the wheat trying to save the boy. Dr. Samuel Shull, summoned from town, raced his car to the scene and found the boy still living, but with his head under the grain. Men with axes cut the lower part of the bin and the wheat ran out and the boy was released, but died after a gasp or two. His respiratory organs were filled with grains of wheat, causing a fatal hemorrhage. His mother and a brother arrived at the elevator in their car just as the body was taken away.

A Farmer Cured of Rheumatism.—“A man living on a farm near here came in a short time ago completely doubled up with rheumatism. I handed him a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment and told him to use it freely,” says C. P. Rayder, Patten Mills, N. Y. “A few days later he walked into the store as straight as a string and handed me a dollar saying, give me another bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment; I want it in the house all the time for it cured me.”

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

That Dependable Ford Quality

FORD durability began back in 1903 when Henry Ford started experimenting with Vanadium steel and heat-treating processes. He knew that a more exact tempering of steel for motor car building must be worked out. Vanadium, it was learned, when added to molten steel, gives to that steel a greater toughness and adhesiveness. And now other alloys have been found which are superior to Vanadium. With the Ford Motor Company constant progress is the daily companion. The Ford products—Car, Truck, Tractor—grow in quality. Heat-treating tempers each part so that it will best withstand the wear or tear to which it is subjected. Ford chemists and analysts have created formulas and standard specifications for every individual part of the Ford car—not only for the steel but for everything from pneumatic tires to top.

Ford durability isn't a matter of accident, it is a matter of painstaking thoroughness in laboratory and factory. The Ford is a car of precision—of standardized values. Order your Ford car now. No matter how fast they may be made the demand multiplies faster. Order today for we can make fairly prompt deliveries—Runabout, Touring Car, Coupe, Sedan, Truck and Fordson Tractor.

Relates Burial of Washington

Fake Ulster County Gazette Most Noted Newspaper Forgery of Country.

NO GENUINE COPY KNOWN

Library Officials Doubt If There Is Genuine Copy of Newspaper of That Date in Existence—Forgery Is Easily Proven.

Chicago. — Perennially and usually about this time copies of the most noted newspaper forgery of the country — the Ulster County Gazette of January 4, 1800, with its account of Washington's funeral—comes to light. The only other newspaper imitation of the kind that compares is the duplication of the Vicksburg Citizen, printed on wall paper during the siege in 1862. "I doubt if there is a genuine copy of the Ulster County Gazette of that date in existence," Edward A. Henry, who is in charge of the University of Chicago's collection of old newspapers, said. "At any rate, I have never seen one, nor do I know of anybody who has."

"Wilberforce Eames of the New York public library told me half a dozen years ago that he had made the most careful examinations of copies of the Gazette submitted to him as genuine—even to chemical analysis of the paper—and had almost come to the conclusion that there never was an original."

26 Different Editions.

"At the Library of Congress I was told they had 26 different editions. The New York public library lists nine in its latest catalog. We have three, each different from the other."

"I suppose there was once a genuine Ulster County Gazette of the date named, from which all these subsequent copies have been made. The fact that the Wisconsin State Historical society, which has the largest collection of old newspapers in the Middle West, lists two copies of an Ulster Gazette for August 18 and September 22, 1804, strengthens this belief."

"The account of Washington's funeral is accurate and interesting. No fault can be found on that score, although I think reports of the funeral in other papers of the same time are in several instances still more striking."

"It may have been that many years after the funeral some printer probably in the vicinity of New York, for Kingston, Ulster county, is on the Hudson, thought to produce something of interest to others and profit to himself by making a facsimile of an original account. Had he taken a New York paper, the duplication could have been instantly detected and perhaps for this reason the obscure Ulster county paper was made to serve.

Trick Went Well.

"The trick evidently went well, and perhaps it was this same printer that put out many of the subsequent editions. That is all supposition of course, but there is no doubt of the multitude of editions. Their genuineness only an expert can pass on in most cases. The test is the paper. Most of these copies were made before 1850, but not early enough to have used the fine linen rag paper of 1800. That soft paper will be good for many hundred years yet, while the earliest Ulster County Gazette we have is already badly discolored."

"Variations are found in the printing of the different editions of the same date. In two of our copies the name of the paper is set in italics; in the other it is not. The enterprising publisher of the newest of our forgeries added the word 'copyright.'"

Make Big Hit at Peru

American Jackies Thoroughly at Home in Lima, the Capital.

Cafe Managers Find It Saves Trouble to Have Bill Agree With Menu Prices and Change Correct.

Calla. — A strange language, a still more puzzling currency and exchange rate and a strike of chauffeurs and coach drivers during the Atlantic fleet's visit to Peru did not prevent American sailors from filtering into every nook and cranny of Lima, seven miles from this port, from the humblest saloon to the cathedral.

"They may have lost a little in exchange or paid more for a meal than the average Peruvian, but the smiling storekeeper and cafe manager found it saved them time and trouble to have their bill agree with menu prices and their change correct. For instance: In one of the best hotels a tanned, husky man called for the bill for himself and three companions."

"No," he declared, "it's too much," as the waiter laid down a bit of paper with a column of figures on it.

"How do you know it's too much; you haven't looked at it yet?" one of his friends remonstrated.

"It's always too much the first time," the husky man replied without moving his hand from the pile of Peruvian currency he had placed on the table. "I've been in France, and I know."

A long argument ensued in English by the sailor and Spanish by the waiter.

The head waiter came, tried his ten

Green Peppers Stuffed With Rice.
Take six small even sized green peppers, cut in halves lengthwise, wash and remove all seeds and white fiber. Scald with boiling water, boil three minutes, then drain. Boil rice in salted water until tender, using one-half cupful. Drain rice, add two tablespoonfuls of butter, one fourth of a teaspoonful of poultry seasoning, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, or more to taste, one egg, and heat and mix well. Fill the pepper shells. Put one-fourth of a cupful of bacon fat, or four slices of bacon in the pan, bake until firm and lightly browned, using the bacon fat for basting. Serve with lamb fricassee.

Hot Water Ginger Bread.

Take one cupful each of sugar and molasses, one-half cupful of melted fat, one egg beaten, a teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of ginger, three cupfuls of sifted flour, and when all are well mixed add a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in one cupful of boiling water. Stir until smooth, pour into a well greased dripping pan and bake 40 minutes in a moderate oven.

Currant Bread.

Take two cupfuls of light bread sponge and work into it one-half cupful of butter and the same of sugar, which have been creamed together. Add one cupful of currants or two tablespoonfuls of caraway seeds. Let rise in a loaf. When light bake in a moderate oven. This is nice to serve with tea.

Buttermilk Custard Pie.

Cream a tablespoonful of butter with one cupful of sugar, add the beaten yolks of three eggs and stir in one cupful of fresh thick buttermilk; add one-half teaspoonful of vanilla and fold in the egg whites beaten stiff. Pour into a deep plate lined with pastry and bake one hour.

Fruit Punch.

Make a sirup of one cupful each of sugar and water, cool and add the juice of an orange, the juice of two lemons, one-half cupful of apricot juice, one-fourth cupful each of prune and cherry juice; add two quarts of water and pieces of ice; garnish with cherries. This recipe makes two and a half quarts.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

CONTENT; DISCONTENT

"The toad beneath the harrow knows Exactly where each tooth point goes; The butterfly upon the road Preaches contentment to that toad."

NOT all of Kipling's best poetry is printed in large type. Some of it appears in the smaller characters when it precedes verses which the author thought were more important.

That is the case with the lines printed above which in the bound volume serve as an introduction to "Pagett, M. P."

But one need not be a butterfly to preach contentment. There is many a man and woman living far from a butterfly life that preach contentment in the most forcible and convincing way, which is by example.

Discontent is very contradictory in its results. It has been responsible for innumerable failures. It has been the most forcible factor in the greatest of the world's revolutions and reformations.

Get a man or a nation thoroughly discontented with surroundings, with laws, with government and there is bound to be a change.

Discontent has played a considerable factor in the history of America.

It was discontent, dissatisfaction means the same thing, with the means of communication with the rest of the world that led Columbus to sail out into the mysteries of the Western oceans.

It was discontent with the religious restriction of their home country that led the Pilgrims to sail for Plymouth.

It was discontent with the laws under which they were living that led the fathers of this country to rid themselves of the English yoke and become a free and independent people.

In any one of these instances contentment would have been the worst thing that could have happened to America, the worst condition that could have obtained. It would have stifled progress and hindered the advancement of the whole world.

But where discontent is useful once it is harmful a thousand times because it is for the most part badly based.

Are you discontented with your home? Nine times out of ten your home could be made better if you really wanted to exert yourself to make it better.

Are you discontented with your job?

Ninety-nine times out of a hundred you are not making half as much of your job as you ought to.

You are not taking interest enough in it.

You are not trying to make yourself and your job bigger and better.

Try it for a few days and see if contentment is not the result.

Are you discontented with your government? Some writer has set down the truth that "every people is as well governed as it deserves to be."

In other words, if your government is not right and just and if under it you suffer without reason, then you and others who suffer are to blame for not changing it by proper means and lawful and orderly procedure.

Breaking a law never bettered a law.

Contentment is the world's greatest preventive of gray hair and wrinkles. It is the best preservative of youth and happiness. It is the most wonderful antidote for an ill nature or a crabbed disposition.

Cultivate contentment with every thing good.

Encourage contentment with what is impossible of change.

Be discontented only with what is unjust and do not be contented until the wrong has been righted.

The toad, if he dodges all the harrow's teeth, is after all not so badly off. The exercise doubtless does him good.

WOMEN'S INTERESTS

THERE is perhaps no surer way of discovering just how the interests and the opportunities of woman have broadened in the last very few years than to study the women's magazines.

The business woman is carefully considered today in these publications. Her training, her chances of success, new fields where she may try for positions; these are exploited. There are articles on subjects that would never have been touched upon five or six years ago, or even two or three years ago.

Finance is another department that has shown tremendous development in such magazines. Women are learning to manage their own funds, and when the women's colleges run successful campaigns for great sums, as they do now, and invest and disburse such sums, the day when woman was not supposed to understand the money market is indeed gone.

Naturally the coming of the vote to women has brought a lot of political material into these pages. The work women can do in politics, her responsibilities, clear expositions of what the different political parties stand for, these are some of the directions in which expansion is shown. Women want to know a whole lot of things that they did not, as a class, care about only a short time ago. And what women want, they get.

There is hardly a limit to what the well-trained, clever, ambitious girls may expect of life in the way of service, interesting work, a good income, independence, influence on the future of her country, and a full home life. It is truly, today, up to her.

Japs Lose a Million

Census of 1920 Shows Big Decrease in Population.

Practically Every City Shows a Big Drop as Compared With Incorrect Figures of 1918.

Tokyo. — Population figures that prove the population of the Japanese empire over 1,000,000 less than it was estimated in 1918 were given out by the bureau of national power investigation here recently. Practically every city shows a large decrease as compared with the incorrect figures of 1918, Tokyo alone being 190,000 less than its semi-official figures indicated.

The population of the empire, according to these figures, which are the result of months of labor on the part of the bureau officials, is 77,005,510; that of Japan proper, exclusive of Korea, Formosa and Saghalien, 55,961,140.

Both of these figures are less by more than a million than the figures given in 1918. The population of the empire, then estimated from a compilation of old registers, was given at 78,261,850, or 1,235,340 more than the census of 1920 gives. The decrease for the Japanese empire, therefore, is 1.6 per cent.

Thus Japan, by its first modern census, for the 1920 figures are the first made along modern lines of investigation, fails to bear out its story of ever increasing population which is literally driving the nation to seek new lands in Asia and send its immigrants out into the far corners of the earth.

Since the fall of the Tokugawa it has been customary to compile all census records from old registers and it has been known for some time that duplications were not only apt to creep in, but that they had come to be the customary thing.

According to the new figures, there are 128,850 more males than females in Japan proper. The total number of families in Japan proper is 11,222,053.

Tokyo, Osaka and Kobe rank the first three cities of the empire in the list of statistics.

Joined Church; Restored Bill Taken Years Before

A $5 bill, that had been carried for 25 years by a man to whom a Portland (Me.) merchant gave two bills instead of one in making change, was returned to the merchant a few days ago. The man explained that his conscience had troubled him so that he had feared to spend the money, and recently, when he had joined a church, he felt impelled to return it.

III. THE TRAP—Continued.

Priscilla began to get her bearings, finding herself in that sordid room where she had witnessed the meeting of Leonora and Inez, beside the insistent body of the drug fiend, on the night of the storm. She reviewed face after face known to her through the associations of her dreams; English Eddie, heavy, florid and flashy; Charlie the Coke, ghastly of face, shift-eyed, with his frail, racked body and spasmodic gestures; Inez with elbows clamped between two fists; at her side, the Nut, to whose presence nothing of his uptown elegance adhered but the handiwork of his excellent tailor, laboring under the burden of a new part, self-assured, his bottle neck shoulders wearing with poor grace the mantle of Red Carnehan, master of gunmen; three or four others, remembered as lesser limbs of Red's gang.

The company sat in silence, staring at Nora with unfriendly, inquisitive eyes. Precisely so had Leonora on that occasion faced a prejudiced jury of her kind. Only the setting was slightly different, the company decimated, its presiding spirit gone beyond recall.

The pause lasted longer than the patience of Inez. She sat up suddenly and waved an extravagant arm, mimicking the manner of bally-hoo before a circus side show.

"Ladeez and gempmum!" she proclaimed in a flat professional bawl: "I have the honor to present to you tonight the only certified Two-in-One in captivity—Miss Priscilla Maine, the latest fashion hint from Fifth avenue, and plain Nora O'More of this club. Take a good look, ladeez and gempmum, at this peerless freak, the only livin' Two of a Kind. A single price of admission pays for both—one dime, the tenth part of a dollar—and your money back if y'aint sat'sfied!"

IV. RESURRECTION.

Somebody chuckled hoarsely. Chairs were shifted. Asides were exchanged in audible murmurs. A contemptuous voice declared loudly: "It's Nora, all right, all right!" The Nut bent his mouth to mumble into the ear of Inez something apparently in the nature of a remonstrance. She heard him with a surly face, growled a response which seemed to irritate him exceedingly, and turned scornfully away. English Eddie alone changed neither her pose nor the moderately dubious expression with which she was regarding Priscilla.

The latter, drawing upon an unexpected store of latent spirit, moved forward to the edge of the table.

"My name is Priscilla Maine," she uttered with difficulty. "I—I—"

"My Gawd!" Inez commented dramatically—"she admits it!"

"Please!" Priscilla pleaded—"I can hardly speak—give me something to drink—water."

English Eddie sat forward sharply and squirmed siphon water into a glass. "A drop of brandy, dearie?"

"Ladeez and gempmum!" She proclaimed in a flat, professional bawl.

she suggested in a tone not unkind. Priscilla shook her head. "You'd better," the woman insisted; "you need it." She tilted a bottle over the glass, coloring the water with the liquor. Despairing of getting what she wanted, too thirsty to permit of long hesitation, Priscilla put the glass to her lips and drank.

"Everybody sit tight," Inez warned; "the big bunk act is about to commence."

Priscilla lowered the glass, nodded her thanks to the English woman, and with something remotely resembling defiance again confronted her captors. "I am Priscilla Maine," she stated for the second time. "What do you want with me?"

The Nut tipped his chair back and eyed her quizzically. "An even break," he replied.

"And no more shenanigan," Inez supplemented.

Priscilla looked blank. "I don't understand."

"Ah—cut out the stallin'!" Inez flared. "I'm gettin' sick of your airs and everythin'!"

"I don't understand," Priscilla repeated patiently, ignoring the interruption. "I'm not the woman you believe me to be."

She addressed herself directly to Harry: "I told you that this afternoon, if you had made the inquiries I asked you to, you could have satisfied yourself I was telling the truth. As it is, you have done this thing—kidnaped me—laid yourself open to the law."

"We'll take our chances with the law," Inez put in, sardonically. "But don't mind me; you intrust us strangely. Go on, go on."

"But even if I were Leonora—assume that I am—what do you want with me?"

"An even break," Harry iterated—"fair play and no more stallin'."

"Please explain what you mean—and let me go."

"Fat chance," Inez commented.

"I am ill, unfit to stand on my feet or talk to you—but if you will only let me go, I promise to keep this outrage to myself. The police need never know it!"

"You can go, maybe," Harry responded—"when we've come to an understanding and you've satisfied us you'll act in good faith and not try any more foolishness."

"Won't you please explain?"

"Ah! You know perfectly well—I!" Inez began.

With a sharp explosion of temper Harry silenced her. "Be quiet! If you want us to get anywhere with this talk—keep quiet. If you go on like this, you'll only make her stubborn."

"That's right," English Eddie advised. "Give Nora a chance, dearie."

Inez meditated mutely, thought better of it, subsided into a fit of sulk.

"I'm sure it's simple enough," Harry proceeded loftily, with something of the condescension of one humoring a wilful child—"I'm sure you understand what we want, Nora; but if you insist I'll try to put it in words of one syllable. We're all old pals of yours, and we feel we've got a right to be let in on the ground floor when you've struck it rich like you have. We want a chance to work in with you and cop out something for ourselves. You've got the inside track now—God knows how you worked it, but you did—you've got it, you can go where you want and do about as you please with the Ritz mob. And that makes it simple for you to open things up for us. You know what we can do, each one of us; you can easily slip us a tip now and then and leave the rest to us. All I ask for myself, for instance, is a few introductions. I'll take care of the rest."

"I think you must be mad!" Priscilla's head was swimming again. "Was it to tell me this that you—"

"Precisely," Harry assented with an amiable nod.

For an instant she was dumb with force. Then the vertigo beginning to pass, and with it the fear of fainting again; she found fresh confidence and was visited by an inspiration of cunning.

"If I refuse?"

"You'll get twenty-four hours to think it over," the Nut replied. "If by that time you're still stubborn..."

"And if I agree?"

"We'll put our heads together and scheme out a working arrangement."

"But, I'm too ill tonight..."

A gleam dawned in the ugly little eyes of the Nut.

"That sounds like you mean to come down to earth."

Priscilla inclined her head: "I will do what you wish."

"Sensible young woman!"

"But I'm unable to discuss details tonight."

"You can go back and lie down till you feel stronger."

"No. I can't stay here. You must let me go home."

Inez laughed aloud.

"Hardly, my dear," Harry said. "You won't get another chance to give me the slip until the cases are all framed, and I'm satisfied you won't dare try it again."

"You'll have to take my word sometime—now or later."

"Sorry—no can do."

English Eddie interposed: "But we all know Leonora never went back on her word."

"Never," Priscilla affirmed; and had wit enough to refrain from throwing a look of gratitude to this new-found ally.

"Ah, for Gawd's sake!" Inez protested in disgust. "You make me weary. If you think you can trust that double-faced cat any further'n you can see her—I!"

"I don't ask you to trust me," Priscilla explained—"only to give me time to rest in quiet and comfort—not here—before we go into our plans. And you need not trust me, I'm willing that one of you shall come with me and see that I play fair. You can trust Addie..."

"That's perfectly fair," the Englishwoman insisted. "I'll go with Nora, and you know me well enough to know she won't lift 'er and without me seein' it."

"All right," the Nut conceded. "Take Addie home with you and give me your word you'll be ready to see me at eleven tomorrow..."

Inez flounced to her feet in a rage. "You pack of poor boobies!" she shrieked. "Can't you see she's only frauln' to slip you the double cross—and you all helpin' her!"

"Only one thing more," Priscilla insisted, as if she had not heard. "I must have my things back—my suit, my blouse, my jewelry."

"Hello!" Harry sat forward, eyeing her sharply. "Thought you looked different. What's become of your clothes?"

Priscilla's nod indicated Inez. "She stole them from me. Make her give them back."

The Nut turned to Inez, scowling blackly. "Give them back!"

"Yes, I will—not. I got a bromide enlargement of me bel'n' such a simp."

"You'll do as I say," Harry insisted darkly. "I'm runnin' this show—"

"You are—like h—!"

The girl's defiance found an echo in a new voice at the back of the room.

"Like h—I-is right!"

There was a concerted turning of startled heads.

The door had opened noiselessly. It framed the figure of a man wearing a greasy red sweater hiked up at either hip to permit his hands to remain in the pockets of a pair of tattered, frayed and stained khaki trousers. His pose was rudely nonchalant. A cap of gray cloth pulled forward shadowed his eyes; but the face stamped with an evil, mirthless grin, was unmistakable.

After a moment's relish of the dramatic sensation effected by his unheralded resurrection, Red Carnehan slouched in, closed the door with a kick of his heel, and put his shoulders to it.

"It'll take a smarter guy'n you are or ever will be, Harry," he asserted in a blurred voice of arrogance, "to boss this bunch as long's I'm on top of the map."

V. THE HAUNTED MAN.

Stupefied silence held till shattered by a laugh of uncouth joy.

"Red!" Inez cried, jumping up and overturning her chair. "Red Carnehan! My Gawd, Red, you've come back!"

"I'll say I have."

Grimacing, the gunman slouched toward the table.

They crowded about Carnehan, shaking his hands, slapping his back, screaming and bellowing a hundred phrases of congratulation, delight, and amazement, together with questions innumerable. He suffered the ovation, laughing, greeting each by name, yielding his hands to one after another.

Then, without warning he began to strike down the fawning hands and thrust his way through the group toward the table.

"Lay off me!" he snarled. "Lay off—gimme air! I'll bean the next guy what puts his hands onto me! Lay off!"

"But Red!" Addie protested—"we thought you was dead!"

"You wasn't far wrong, at 'at." Carnehan seized the brandy bottle and chattered its neck against a glass into which he spilled the raw spirit lavishly. The drink at his lips, his gaze, roving above the brim, discovered and was transfixed by the pale, set face of Priscilla. He started violently. As if an invisible but mighty hand had struck him a crashing blow, he staggered back, lost his footing, brought up heavily against the table. Bottle and glass, escaping his palsied grasp, crashed to the floor. In a fluttering breath the blood drained from his face, and left it livid, leaden and blue. His widened eyes were fixed in horror.

"What's 'at?" Broken words brushed his stiff lips. "What's 'at?" He lifted a shaking arm and singled out Priscilla. His voice became a scream: "Name of Gawd! somebody tell me—what's 'at there?"

The Nut dropped a soothing hand upon his shoulder.

"Why, Red—it's Nora!"

"Nora?" the gunman chattered. "I know it's Nora! But what's it doin' here?"

"But, Red!"—in alarm English Eddie ranged up on his other side and laid hold of his arm—"why shouldn't Nora be here?"

"Why?" He glared madly at the woman. "Why, 'cause she's dead."

"But, Red—" "I tell you! I guess I oughta know. Didn't I croak her meself, up there in the woods, yest'day aft'noon?"

He seemed to realize what he had said and tried to cover it with hysterical protest. "No; that's a lie! Who said I croaked her! I never, she done it herself, it was all an accident! I tell you I didn't have nothin' to do with it—her foot slipped and she went over the edge before I could catch her, and I seen her drown! I couldn't help her, I don't know how to swim, I'd 've pulled

"But, Red—you're off your nut!" Addie reasoned. "Nora couldn't be dead and here at the same time—"

The Kitchen Cabinet

There is no other happiness in the world except that of a soul content with its own condition. This is the way to carry heaven about with you.—Alphonse de Sarasin.

MORE THINGS TO EAT.

Rarebits are emergency dishes which are liked by almost everybody and make a hot dish which may be prepared in a short time.

Mexican Rabbit.—Melt one tablespoonful of butter; in it cook one green pepper cut in squares. When softened a little add one pound of common cheese, cut in small bits, and stir constantly until melted; add two-thirds of a cupful of fresh or canned corn, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of paprika, two eggs well beaten and two-thirds of a cupful of tomato. Stir and cook until smooth and well blended, and when thoroughly hot, serve on rounds of toast, toasted on one side. Serve the rabbit on the untoasted side.

Cream of Corn Soup.—Cook one-half of an onion finely minced in four tablespoonfuls of butter until brown. Add four tablespoonfuls of flour, two cupfuls of milk after the flour has been well blended, two teaspoonfuls of salt, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of pepper and one or two bouillon cubes, provided they are not ninety-nine per cent salt; if so, add no salt until after the cubes are added. Add experience with bouillon cubes should make us wise. Cook until the mixture thickens and add one pint of sweet corn put through a colander. Let the whole boil up once and serve with croutons.

Green Cheese.—Take two ounces of fresh parsley, one ounce of fresh water cress, one ounce of celery. Dry the parsley before the fire until crisp so that it can be crumbled, but not until it has lost its color. Chop the cress and celery, add the crumbled parsley and mix with four ounces of fresh green cheese. Season with cayenne and salt, and put through a colander. Form into small cheeses to pass with the salad.

Another cheese mixture which is a great favorite is cream cheese mixed with a cupful or two of grated American, seasoned with salt and cayenne, adding cream to make the mixture into a smooth roll or into small patties. Decorate with sliced, stuffed olives.

All you have really to do is to keep your back as straight as you can, and not to think about what is on it; above all not to boast of what is on it. The real meaning of virtue is in that straightness of the back.—Ruskin.

MISCELLANEOUS HELPS.

Before putting the beans into the pot to bake, grease the top well down inside and an inch or two on the outside. The pot will wash much easier. Citron or orange or lemon peel may be prepared easily by soaking a few minutes in hot water, then put through the meat grinder.

When baking apples fill the centers with broken bits of walnuts and a spoonful of strained honey.

A long-handled corn popper is a fine toaster or broiler. Use in the furnace and broil chops or steak or make a place of toast.

Gilt frames may be cleaned with oil of turpentine. Rub on with a cloth after dusting well.

Celery salt may be prepared at home. Grind through the finest knife in the meat grinder two ounces of celery seed, add ten times the bulk of salt, stir and mix well and put into a bottle.

A dark blue cover made of denim or gingham is good to slip over the ironing board to save it when pressing suits or dark clothing.

A child's small saddle is most useful in ironing baby's dresses.

Very pretty and dainty baby shoes may be made from old glove tops. Take the long white kid gloves, have the wrists perfectly clean and press out carefully with a warm iron to remove all wrinkles. Cut the soles and sides in one piece, making the soles wide enough in front to come up over the toes. Put a seam in the back and gather the fullness where the sides do not meet. Line with soft silk; eyelets may be
